

Greeks Repulse Fascist Counter-Attacks; Anglo Threat to Bulgaria Cited

Italians Are Reported as Having Lost Many Men in Central Area of Albania

Trap Is Closed

British Refuse to Fall Back at Bengasi as Tanks Attack

(By The Associated Press)

The Greeks were reported today to have hurled back two Fascist counter-attacks in the central sector of the Albanian front, inflicting heavy losses on the Italians in the same area where three days ago Fascist and armored car assaults failed.

On the African front matters were going even more disastrously for Premier Mussolini's forces. It was reliably reported today in Istanbul, Turkey, but without official confirmation that Britain had warned Bulgaria that passage of German troops through that nation would bring British bombing of Bulgarian military objectives.

The report circulated in diplomatic quarters that a formal note delivered to the Bulgarian foreign office by the British minister in Sofia, warned that Nazi military penetration of Bulgaria in order to attack Britain's ally, Greece, would bring British aerial action.

Britain was understood to have specified that the RAF would bomb railways and other communication facilities if Bulgaria allowed Nazi troops on her soil.

Sofia May Submit

The official Turkish press, which until recently insisted Bulgaria would resist German demands for passage of troops, now is declaring Sofia may submit to Axis pressure. The press has warned repeatedly that a Nazi advance toward Aegean would bring Turkey into the war.

This change in the attitude of the Turkish newspapers coincided with rumors in Sofia that German action may be imminent in the Balkans.

Bulgarian passenger train service toward the Rumanian, Turkish and Greek frontiers has been curtailed by 30 per cent, effective today, an action which would be consistent with military preparations.

The Bulgarian foreign minister, Ivan Popoff, was reported yesterday to have warned a secret parliamentary meeting that he was uncertain of the future.

The last of the Fascist garrison of Bengasi was reported "surrendering in large numbers" after a furious assault with tanks failed to break open a British trap along the coastal road of retreat south of the port.

Final resistance in the area crumbled, a Cairo communique declared, after the Italians suffered heavy casualties and lost 60 tanks. The British closed the trap by a forced march of 150 miles in 30 hours timed to coincide with the attack to which Bengasi fell two days ago.

The British command did not estimate the number of captives taken, but previous reports put the Bengasi garrison at 25,000 troops. Among the prisoners were an army commander, a corps commander, and "many other senior officers."

Less Spectacular Reports

Less spectacular reports came from the East African front where the British reported they had taken 3,500 prisoners. The British were closing in for a final attack on Cheren, next objective on the road to Asmara, Eritrean capital.

The continuing success of the British African campaign was believed by some observers to have encouraged the French government to Vichy in resisting German demands for more active collaboration—perhaps involving use of the naval base at Bizerte, in French Tunisia.

The Vichy government yesterday made public a pledge of General Maxime Weygand, commander of French North African forces, that he would not surrender Bizerte for use against the British.

Admiral Jean Darlan, French naval minister, returned today to Vichy from Paris, presumably bearing Pierre Laval's latest terms for his return to the government. Laval is general-in-chief of the French navy and is reported to be in agreement of collaboration with the Nazis.

On the British home front the RAF, disregarding dirty weather over the English Channel, pounded the Nazi "invasion ports" of Dunkerque and Boulogne for two hours last night in an attack described as on a "conceivable scale."

Storm Floods Wide Area in East on Hurricane Route

La Guardia Airport Is Isolated; 55-Mile Wind Hits Maine; Factories Are Shut Down

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—A torrential storm that followed the path of the 1938 hurricane subsided today over New England after flooding New York city with a 2.63 inch downpour in 13 hours.

The storm swept up from Cape Hatteras yesterday, temporarily isolated huge La Guardia airport and flooded many areas.

Originating in the Gulf of Mexico Thursday night, it sped unexpectedly northeast.

Connecticut appeared to be hardest hit in New England. Two factory buildings temporarily shut down at Waterbury after a foot of water from an overflowing reservoir covered their floors.

The wind held steadily for a time at 55 miles an hour at Portland, Me., with mile-a-minute gusts.

Indications were that property damage was not great.

A British freighter, the 5,791-ton Ramon De Larriga, radioged at midnight (E. S. T.) she was listing badly in tumultuous seas 75 miles off Atlantic City, N. J. Coast Guard cutters were dispatched from New York and Cape May, N. J.

The 57-ton oil boat Angie and Florence reported her engines out of commission four miles east of Portland, Me., lightsight. The cutter Algonquin was sent to help.

Torments that submerged some New York city streets in 12 feet of water cut off La Guardia Field telephonically, telegraphically and even to some extent by radio. Emergency apparatus was rigged up while repairs were made.

Deaths attributed to the storm included that of a truck driver crushed under a seven-ton load of sand which absorbed so much water the weight collapsed the vehicle.

20,000 Men at Dix

Fort Dix, N. J., Feb. 8 (AP)—For the first time since demobilization after the World War, the population of this military post exceeds 20,000. At midnight last night the exact figure was 20,455, counting the arrival during the day of 444 new trainees from New York, Newark and Trenton, and the departure of 510 men for Fort McClellan, Ala.

Pact Is Reached Between C. I. O. and Milwaukee Plant Officers; Sidney Hillman Optimistic

(By The Associated Press)

An agreement between striking C. I. O. unionists and the management of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company at Milwaukee authorized workers today to remove from the idle factory completed equipment said to be "vital" needed by the army and navy.

The strike, which has kept 9,000 workers from their machines since January 22, was called by the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers who asked a closed shop and other concessions.

The equipment removal agreement was reached last night shortly after Col. Donald Armstrong, the army's district ordinance executive, declared the strike was "endangering the safety of the country" by holding up the entire powder production program.

Before Justice William H. Murray of Troy, sitting in regular special term of Supreme Court at Kingston Friday, Samuel Nuzzo, who is financial secretary and also treasurer of Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Local Union No. 17, along with other officers and individuals of the local were charged with numerous acts of maladministration in office and with treating with "utter contempt" made by union members, both regarding such alleged illegal acts, but also against alleged existing working conditions on portions of the work of the New York city water project.

Justice Murray reserved decision in the case.

It was charged that elections for officers of the local had not been held in several years, that financial statements were not made, as required by the constitution, to account for receipts at around $800,000; that those who protested were hounded out of jobs, that conditions at various shafts are, or have been bad, with procedure in violation of law and that men did not receive the wages to which they were entitled.

The charges were made in connection with arguments on a motion for a temporary injunction in an action brought by Frederick W. Dusing and 16 other members of Local 17. The plaintiffs seek an injunction to compel the holding of an election, to compel the rendering of a financial statement and an accounting to the members of the local. It is asked also that defendants be restrained from removing plaintiffs from membership in the local because they have complained of maladministration of affairs.

Francis Martocci, associated with Charles de la Vergne, local counsel for the plaintiffs—Boudin, Cohn and Glickstein being attorneys of record—opened the argument before Justice Murray.

He said that plaintiffs asked that Nuzzo be restrained from depriving the rank and file of the members of their rights and privileges, including death benefits; also that defendants be restrained from discriminating against certain members in their attempts to secure work.

Calls It Equity Action

Mr. Martocci said also that this was an equity action brought to "compel an honest election," and for an "accounting of over $600,000 in funds collected by the financial secretary of the union."

It was claimed that more than 6,000 members had joined the union in the last four years. It is conceded that only $2,000 was left in the treasury recently, Mr. Martocci said, and they sought to find out what had become of all these funds.

Nuzzo and others seek to perpetuate themselves in office and "spend the money as they see fit," it was claimed. No election had been held for years.

Dallas Fire Kills 8 and Injures 25

Tragedy Occurs Early Today at Salvation Army Mission; 57 in Building

Blames Panic

Divisional Officer Says Fright Was Cause of Deaths

Dallas, Texas, Feb. 8 (AP)—Death toll in the fire that swept the Salvation Army men's lodge and mission reached eight early today. None had been identified.

Major Ernest Pickering of the Salvation Army said 25 other men were badly burned or otherwise injured in the sudden, roaring blaze originating in a room where the clothing of 57 transients were being deloused.

A few minutes after the fire broke out, one nude man, badly seared, ran screaming to a garage a block away and fell to the ground. His arms spasmodically clutching at a pillar.

The manager of the filling station called an ambulance, while an attendant threw a blanket about the burned man, who was crying for water.

Another, also nude and burned so that his flesh hung in tatters, stood at the center of a street intersection begging for help, while firemen rushed to give him first aid.

Witnesses said the transients crowding the lodge to capacity because of cold weather, dashed to the rear of the upstairs floor when the flames suddenly burst from the delousing room, thinking there was an exit.

Finding none, many of them wrapped blankets about their bodies, or flung themselves nude, through the wall of chemical-fed fire, stampeding down the stairs and bursting into the street.

Others flung themselves from the second floor windows, landing in an alleyway at the rear.

Blames Chemical

Fire Chief L. M. Funk said that the blaze which threw the transients into maddened panic originated from improper use of inflammable chemical and natural gas.

All the victims were given first aid. They had piled their clothing in a tattered heap in a small room for delousing. It was in that room that the fire started.

"Indications are that the fire originated in the delousing room, where clothing of the men was sterilized," Chief Funk said. "With a small open gas stove the clothes were heated until the vermin dropped off onto the floor, where a chemical killed them. The chemical was inflammable."

Brigadier William George Gilks, divisional commander of the Salvation Army for Texas, said that if the men had not opened the door to the fumigation closet everything would have been all right. Instead of wrapping into blankets and flung into the street the men would have been able to save their clothing, permitting air to reach the smoldering blaze in the closet.

The improvised hotel was crowded to capacity because of cold weather and many of the men were trampled in the rush to escape.

Screaming and groaning, 18 or 20 of the men fled down the narrow stairs, only exit to the hotel. Two of those trapped in the rear of the building were crippled and could not escape. Several who jumped from rear windows were taken to hospitals with broken legs and serious burns.

The dead men were burned almost beyond recognition.

Lying in a hospital near death is Julius Benson, 45, ex-soldier and temporary nightwatchman who carried three men to safety from the blazing structure before he collapsed.

Households Increase

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—America's households increased 16.6 per cent between 1930 and 1940, while the population increased only 7.2 per cent. The census bureau explained that while the nation's total population increased during the decade, the size of the average family decreased from 4.1 to 3.8 persons. More homes or apartments thus became necessary.

R. W. Moore Dies

Fairfax, Va., Feb. 8 (AP)—R. Walton Moore, 51-year-old counsel of the state department, died of pneumonia at his home here early today. Moore, a bachelor, served in Congress from 1919 through 1931 and was appointed assistant secretary of state in September 1933, the first year of the Roosevelt administration.

Men Are Injured As Truck Rights Itself in Ditch

Heavy Ballantine Machine Turns Back on Wheels as Group Removed Most of Cargo

In an accident described as "freakish" three men who were unloading the heavy Ballantine trailer-truck wrecked at West Park yesterday morning, were injured when the machine righted itself after most of its cargo had been removed yesterday afternoon.

Most seriously injured was William Foster of Newark, N. J., official of the Ballantine Company, who was assisting the other men in the job of unloading.

Mr. Foster was taken to Kingsport Hospital for treatment of lacerations of the right hand, bruises and torn ligaments of the right shoulder. He was discharged from the hospital following the taking of X-rays and general treatment.

The two others injured were Stewart Martin, 57, Freeman Street, Newark, N. J., and Walter Bonbrook of Irvington, N. J., who had been the driver of the truck at the time it skidded off the highway and turned over yesterday morning.

The other two also suffered lacerations of the hands and head injuries caused mostly by broken glass.

All of the men were given first aid treatment by Mrs. Claud Barringer, wife of the owner of the gas station near the scene of the accident. Later they were treated by Dr. John A. Olivet of this city. Foster, however, was the only one who went to the hospital.

According to State Trooper James Benson of Highland, who was at the scene of the accident throughout most of the day, the men had removed all but seven kegs of beer from the truck when it gave way from the position in which it had come to rest after the accident and suddenly turned upright.

The truck, because of its heavy load, turned over on one side when it left the highway, tossing its cab section above the body structure. The wheels and cab of the front section which had been left suspended in the air fell back to normal position after the load had been removed.

The heavy Middle Atlantic trailer-truck, which was the first to leave the road when the freezing rain spread a glare of ice over the pavement, remained in the ditch near the Wilkewick School over night. This machine is owned by a Michigan concern and its driver was fined $5 on a charge of operating the machine in New York state without the proper license.

He was arraigned before Peace Justice John O. Beaver.

Arrangements were made with a garage in Kingston to remove the truck from the roadside today. At least seven machines were involved in the mix-up yesterday morning after the Middle Atlantic truck left the road. Four of these were trucks and the others passenger cars. No injuries were reported, however.

Army Will Make Study of Safety Guards for Corps

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The deaths of at least 27 army fliers in airplane accidents in less than two months has prompted the air corps to undertake an intensive study of safety records and crash-prevention measures.

Issuance of a detailed statement of those records, which heretofore have been held secret, was reported today to be under consideration as a means of supporting corps officials' contention that although the number of accidents has increased with expansion of the air corps the ratio of fatalities to hours flown actually has tended downward.

A dozen naval fliers also have been killed since mid-December, but navy department officials said the rate of accidents was not abnormal.

In two months, more army fliers have met death than for entire recent 12-month periods. For the period 1937-38, the average number of fatalities annually from "student and service training," which officials said included all operations, was approximately 23.

The air corps now is several times larger than it was during that period, however. At present it includes more than 6,000 officers, 7,000 flying cadets and 53,000 enlisted men.

Aside from the factor of size, some airmen say they are convinced that accidents sometimes tend to occur in cycles. Three years ago the navy lost more than 30 fliers within a few weeks, mostly during maneuvers of the fleet in the Pacific.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Despite Wendell L. Willkie's indication he did not want the nomination, Republican leaders of the 17th Manhattan congressional district are before choosing a candidate to run for the late Rep. Kenneth F. Simpson's post.

Party officials announced this decision yesterday after State Senator Frederic R. Couderc, Jr., mentioned widely as a possible successor to Simpson, declared he was not a candidate.

Says Aid-Britain Act Is 'Guess and Be Damned Policy' and Undemocratic

Debate Is Going

Freedom of Discussion Is Being Silenced, He Declares

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Alf M. Landon described the British aid bill as a "guess and be damned policy," today, and that President Roosevelt had attempted to "gag" Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.) because of Wheeler's opposition to the measure.

The former governor of Kansas and 1936 Republican presidential nominee also declared in a statement prepared for presentation to the Senate foreign relations committee that "freedom of debate and discussion" on the bill "is being discouraged in America by the flood of government propaganda and war hysteria."

He used the word "dastardly" in describing what he called Mr. Roosevelt's "systematic attempt" to "silence" Wheeler and "weaken his influence."

(At a recent press conference the President was asked to comment on a statement by Wheeler that the nation's armed forces had been stripped of modern combat airplanes to aid Britain. Mr. Roosevelt replied that the use of some people make of defense statistics give comfort to the chancellor of the German Reich.)

Landon said that "many of those who are for all our aid to England say, of course we must debate, but hurry, hurry, hurry."

"And by innuendo, and the sly turn of the adjective," he continued, "these attempt to throw on the opposition the smothering cry of patriotism or personalities as the actuating force behind the opposition to this bill."

Even Pro-German Charge

"The Chief Executive has led the way, by hurling even the charge of pro-Germanism at a leader of opposition in the United States Senate, Senator Wheeler of Montana. If this were to go unnoticed and unchallenged, there would soon be no brakes on the Chief Executive. That is not healthy at any time and under any president in a Republic."

"I have always believed that one of the blackest marks on the record of the Republican party was the attempt to silence Senator Wheeler. I now denounce, as equally dastardly, the systematic attempt of another Chief Executive to silence his voice and blacken his reputation."

He did not amplify his reference to the Republican "attempt to silence" Wheeler.

"Never in all our history—not even in the tragic and bitter Civil War era," Landon added, "have we witnessed a president attempting to gag the mouth of a brilliant and sincere member of the United States Senate, as we are now witnessing in the continued attacks from the White House on Senator Wheeler."

Permits Unlimited Aid

Landon declared that "one of the compelling reasons" he was opposed to the British aid bill was that it "permits unlimited aid."

"The national policy decided in the last election," he said, "was limited aid to England. There was fundamental agreement on that policy. The national policy on unlimited aid was not decided because it was not an issue."

If a British victory is "essential to our security," he said, Congress should "stop fooling around with this lease-lend bill." Let England know "the Yanks are coming" and "coordinate our activities with theirs."

"If an English victory is not essential to our security," he added, "then the only fair and decent thing to do is to say to Britain we will help you with money and materials only; and it is your job to get them. A simple appropriation is all that is needed, if that is our only purpose. And it would be agreed to, practically unanimously."

The fact that the British may need financial assistance, he said, "does not to my mind make it necessary that Congress abdicate its powers under the Constitution, and grant these powers to one man, even though he be the President, unlimited."

Powers Not Explained

Landon said the powers which the bill would confer on the President have not been satisfactorily explained by administration spokesmen. As an example, he cited his belief that as originally drawn the bill would permit the President to provide merchant convoys and naval escorts to transport materiel to England, whereas some of its

Several other labor developments took place in Washington yesterday.
Sidney Hillman, associate director of the office of production management, characterized as "very satisfactory" the whole labor situation as it affected the nation's defense program. He said he saw no need for additional legislation.
President William Green of the American Federation of Labor said the cases of some union officials accused of "racketeering" would be taken up at a meeting of the A. F. L. executive council in Miami, Fla., starting Monday.
War department officials said they would leave up to the companies concerned whether certain labor clauses should be inserted in subcontracts under which the Ford Motor Company proposes to manufacture parts for the Consolidated Aircraft Company.

It is asked also that defendants be restrained from removing plaintiffs from membership in the local because they have complained of maladministration of affairs.

Francis Martocci, associated with Charles de la Vergne, local counsel for the plaintiffs—Boudin, Cohen and Glickstein being attorneys of record—opened the argument before Justice Murray.
He said that plaintiffs asked that Nuzzo be restrained from "depriving the rank and file of the members of their rights and privileges, including death benefits"; also that defendants be restrained from discriminating against certain members in their attempts to secure work.

Calls It Equity Action
Mr. Martocci said also that this was an equity action brought to "compel an honest election," and for an "accounting of over $600,000 in funds collected by the financial secretary of the union."
It was claimed that more than 6,000 members had joined the union in the last four years. It is conceded that only $2,000 was left in the treasury recently, Mr. Martocci said, and they sought to find out what had become of all these funds.
Nuzzo and others seek to perpetuate themselves in office and "siphon the money as they see fit," it was claimed. No election had

Dallas Fire Kills 8 and Injures 25

Tragedy Occurs Early Today at Salvation Army Mission; 57 in Building

Blames Panic

Divisional Officer Says Fright Was Cause of Deaths

Dallas, Texas, Feb. 8 (AP)—Death toll in the fire that swept the Salvation Army men's lodge and mission reached eight early today.
None had been identified.
Major Ernest Pickering of the Salvation Army said 25 other men were badly burned or otherwise injured in the sudden, roaring blaze originating in a room where the clothing of 57 transients were being deloused.

A few minutes after the fire broke out, one nude man, badly seared, ran screaming to a garage a block away and fell to the ground. His arms spasmodically clutching at a pillar.
The manager of the filling station called an ambulance, while an attendant threw a blanket about the burned man, who was crying for water.

Another, also nude and burned so that his flesh hung in tatters, stood at the center of a street intersection begging for help, while firemen rushed to give him first aid.

Witnesses said the transients crowding the lodge to capacity because of cold weather, dashed to the rear of the upstairs floor when the flames suddenly burst from the delousing room, thinking there was an exit.

Finding none, many of them wrapped blankets about their bodies, or flung themselves nude, through the wall of chemical-fed fire, stampeding down the stairs and bursting into the street.

Others flung themselves from the second floor windows, landing in an arroyo at the rear.
Blames Chemical
Fire Chief L. M. Funk said that the blaze which threw the transients into maddened panic originated from improper use of inflammable chemical and natural gas.

All the victims were being given free lodging. They had piled their clothing in a tattered heap in a small front room, for delousing. It was in that room that the fire started.

"Indications are that the fire originated in the delousing room, where clothing of the men was sterilized," Chief Funk said. "With a small open gas stove the clothes were heated until the vermin dropped off onto the floor, where a chemical killed them. The chemical was inflammable."

Brigadier William George Gilks, divisional commander of the Salvation Army for Texas, said that if the men had not opened the door to the fumigation closet everything would have been all right. Instead of wrapping into blankets and flung out into the street the men rushed for the closet to save their clothing, permitting air to reach the smoldering blaze in the closet.

The improvised hotel was crowded to capacity because of cold weather and many of the men were trampled in the rush to escape.
Screaming and groaning, 18 or 20 of the men fled down the narrow stairs, only exit to the hotel. Two of those trapped in the rear of the building were crippled and could not escape. Several who jumped from rear windows were taken to hospitals with broken legs and serious burns.

The dead men were burned almost beyond recognition.
Lying in a hospital near death is Julius Benson, 45, ex-soldier and temporary nightwatchman who carried three men to safety from the blazing structure before he collapsed.

Households Increase
Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—America's households increased 16.6 per cent between 1930 and 1940, while the population increased only 7.2 per cent. The census bureau explained that while the nation's total population increased during the decade, the size of the average family decreased from 4.1 to 3.8 persons. More homes or apartments thus became necessary.

R. W. Moore Dies
Fairfax, Va., Feb. 8 (AP)—R. Walton Moore, 51-year-old counselor of the state department, died of pneumonia at his home here early today. Moore, a bachelor, served in Congress from 1919 through 1931 and was appointed assistant secretary of state in September 1933, the first year of the Roosevelt administration.

They Dug Him Out
Palm Springs, Calif., Feb. 8 (AP)—They had to dig Clyde E. Price out with shovels when his airplane overturned in sand near the airport, but he escaped with only minor cuts on one hand. Price, an army air corps second lieutenant from March Field, overshot the field with his training ship.

Men Are Injured As Truck Rights Itself in Ditch

Heavy Ballantine Machine Turns Back on Wheels as Group Removed Most of Cargo

In an accident described as "freakish" three men who were unloading the heavy Ballantine trailer-truck wrecked at West Park yesterday morning, were injured when the machine righted itself after most of its cargo had been removed yesterday afternoon.

Most seriously injured was William Foster of Newark, N. J., official of the Ballantine Company, who was assisting the other men in the job of unloading.
Mr. Foster was taken to Kingston Hospital for treatment of lacerations of the right hand, bruises and torn ligaments of the right shoulder. He was discharged from the hospital following the taking of X-rays and general treatment.

The two others injured were Stewart Martin, 57 Freeman street, Newark, N. J., and Walter Benbrook of Irvington, N. J., who had been the driver of the truck at the time it skidded off the highway and turned over yesterday morning.

The other two also suffered lacerations of the hands and head injuries caused mostly by broken glass.

All of the men were given first aid treatment by Mrs. Claud Ringer, wife of the owner of the gas station near the scene of the accident. Later they were treated by Dr. John A. Olivet of this city. Foster, however, was the only one who went to the hospital.

According to State Trooper James Benson of Highland, who was at the scene of the accident throughout most of the day, the men had removed all but seven kegs of beer from the truck when it gave way from the position in which it had come to rest after the accident and suddenly turned upright.

The truck, because of its heavy load, turned over on one side when it left the highway, tossing its cab section above the body structure. The wheels and cab of the front section which had been left suspended in the air fell back to normal position after the load had been removed.

The heavy Middle Atlantic trailer truck, which was the first to leave the road when the freezing rain spread a glare of ice over the pavement, remained in the ditch near the Wiltwyck School over night. This machine is owned by a Michigan concern and its driver was fined $5 on a charge of operating the machine in New York state without the proper license. He was arraigned before Peace Justice John O. Beaver.

Arrangements were made with a garage in Kingston to remove the truck from the roadside today. At least seven machines were involved in the mix-up yesterday morning after the Middle Atlantic truck left the road. Four of these were trucks and the others passenger cars. No injuries were reported, however.

Army Will Make Study of Safety Guards for Corps

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The deaths of at least 27 army fliers in airplane accidents in less than two months has prompted the air corps to undertake an intensive study of safety records and crash-prevention measures.

Issuance of a detailed statement of those records, which heretofore have been held secret, was reported today to be under consideration as a means of supporting corps officials' contention that although the number of accidents has increased with expansion of the air corps the ratio of fatalities to hours flown actually has tended downward.

A dozen naval fliers also have been killed since mid-December, but navy department officials said the rate of accidents was not abnormal.

In two months, more army fliers have met death than for entire recent 12-month periods. For the period 1937-39, the average number of fatalities annually from "student and service training," which officials said included all operations, was approximately 23.

The air corps now is several times larger than it was during that period, however. At present it includes more than 6,000 officers, 7,000 flying cadets and 83,000 enlisted men.

Aside from the factor of size, some airmen say they are convinced that accidents sometimes tend to occur in cycles. Three years ago the navy lost more than 30 fliers within a few weeks, mostly during maneuvers of the fleet in the Pacific.

The newspaper criticized both the American press and politicians for a report, which it said originated at a bar in Veracruz, Mexico, that the German "war calendar" envisages joint Soviet and Axis action in North and South America.

Says Aid-Britain Act Is 'Guess and Be Damned Policy' and Undemocratic

Debate Is Going

Freedom of Discussion Is Being Silenced, He Declares

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—Alf M. Landon described the British aid bill as a "guess and be damned policy," today, and that President Roosevelt had attempted to "gag" Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.) because of Wheeler's opposition to the measure.

The former governor of Kansas and 1936 Republican presidential nominee also declared in a statement prepared for presentation to the Senate foreign relations committee that "freedom of debate and discussion" on the bill "is being discouraged in America by the flood of government propaganda and war hysteria."

He used the word "dastardly" in describing what he called Mr. Roosevelt's "systematic attempt" to "silence" Wheeler and "weaken his influence."

(At a recent press conference the President was asked to comment on a statement by Wheeler that the nation's armed forces had been stripped of modern combat airplanes to aid Britain. Mr. Roosevelt replied that the use which some people make of defense statistics gave comfort to the chancellor of the German Reich.)

Landon said that "many of those who are for all out aid to England say, of course we must debate, but hurry, hurry, hurry."

"And by innuendo, and the slithering of the adjective," he continued, "these attempts to throw on the opposition the smothering cry of partnership or personalities as the actuating force behind the opposition to this bill."

Even Pro-German Charge
"The Chief Executive has led the way, by hurling even the charge of pro-German at a leader of opposition in the United States Senate, Senator Wheeler of Montana. If this were to go unnoticed and unchallenged, there would soon be no brakes on the Chief Executive. That is not healthy at any time and under any president in a Republic."

"I have always believed that one of the blackest marks on the record of the Republican party was the attempt to silence Senator Wheeler. I now denounce, as equally dastardly, the systematic attempt of another Chief Executive to silence his voice and blacken his reputation."

He did not amplify his reference to the Republican "attempt to silence" Wheeler.

"Never in all our history—not even in the tragic and bitter Civil War era," Landon added, "have we witnessed a president attempting to gag the mouth of a brilliant and sincere member of the United States Senate, as we are now witnessing in the continued attacks from the White House on Senator Wheeler."

Permits Unlimited Aid
Landon declared that "one of the compelling reasons" he was opposed to the British aid bill was that it "permits unlimited aid."

"The national policy decided in the last election," he said, "was limited aid to England. There was fundamental agreement on that policy. The national policy on unlimited aid was not decided because it was not an issue."

If a British victory is "essential to our security," he said, Congress should "stop fooling around with this lease-lend bill," let England know "the Yanks are coming" and "coordinate our activities with theirs."

"If an English victory is not essential to our security," he added, "then the only fair and decent thing to do is to say to Britain we will help you with money and materials only, and it is your job to get them. A simple appropriation is all that is needed, if that is our only purpose. And it would be agreed to, practically unanimously."

The fact that the British may need financial assistance, he said, "does not to my mind make it necessary that Congress abdicate its powers under the Constitution, and grant these powers to one man, even though he be the President, unlimited."

Powers Not Explained
Landon said the powers which the bill would confer on the President have not been satisfactorily explained by administration spokesmen. As an example, he cited his belief that as originally drawn the bill would permit the President to provide merchant convoys and naval escorts to transport materials to England, whereas some of its

Men Who Arm America: 12

Charles F. Palmer

Charles F. Palmer made a profession of real estate and it has won him international repute, a top spot on the U. S. Defense Commission.

Big, baldish Palmer looks like a career diplomat. Born in Michigan, he went south to Atlanta as a rookie in the First World War, married a Georgian, returned after the war to found Palmer, Inc., and change the fact of the city.

Active in the International Federation of Housing and Town Planning, named chairman of Atlanta Housing Authority, superintended construction of Techwood Homes, first U. S. slum clearance project.

His job: Housing co-ordinator. He must see that workers in the mushrooming arms industry have places to live, will spend millions of U. S. funds to house them near their work.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

What, No Beans?
Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—Sergeant Jay C. Ostrander, training with the National Guard at Fort McClellan, Ala., wrote his parents: "Next time you send a box put a pan of beans in it. We don't get any here."

Hero
South Bend, Ind.—Three-year-old Russell Wilson, Jr., saved his one-year-old brother, Richard, from burning to death. Their mother left him to watch the baby while she went to a grocery.

Garments on a line near the kitchen stove caught fire and fell into the crib. Russell snatched the child out, dragged him to the front porch and yelled. Neighbors called firemen, who put out the blaze and gave Richard first aid for severe burns on arms and legs. The baby wasn't hurt.

Head for Business
Kansas City, Mo.—As two robbers fled his drug store with $30 in loot, Clifford W. Loomis, night manager, grabbed a pistol and fired over their heads.
Police asked why he shot high. "I knew I couldn't hit them anyway, and besides, I saw one of our customers coming toward the store. I wouldn't want to hit a customer."

Glad Tidings
Lincoln, Neb.—A caller at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Houke asked, "Is this the property to rent from Charlotte Alexander, or her estate?"

When they said, "Yes," the man told them:
"It belongs to you now."
Before her death last month Miss Alexander deeded the homes they occupied to seven of her tenants.

Dismal Tidings
Iowa City, Ia.—Prof. George Haskell popped this question to a class:
"How much would you require a prospective husband to be earning before marrying him?"
Eighty-five per cent demanded $2,500 a year.
"Well," Haskell said, "less than 15 per cent of the income receivers in the nation earn more than $2,500 a year. So about 85 per cent of you can expect to be old maids."

Sugar Fuel Ample
In an emergency, South Africa can supply 42,000,000 gallons of motor fuel from its sugar plantations. This is more than a quarter of the annual needs, Johannesburg reports. The Natal Sugar Industry has given this estimate to the authorities after an extensive survey. Because the normal sources of gasoline might be cut off in the East if war swept that region, the South African Cane Growers obtained the survey.

Men Who Arm America: 12

Charles F. Palmer

Charles F. Palmer made a profession of real estate and it has won him international repute, a top spot on the U. S. Defense Commission.

Big, baldish Palmer looks like a career diplomat. Born in Michigan, he went south to Atlanta as a rookie in the First World War, married a Georgian, returned after the war to found Palmer, Inc., and change the fact of the city.

Active in the International Federation of Housing and Town Planning. Named chairman of Atlanta Housing Authority, superintended construction of Techwood Homes, first U. S. slum clearance project.

His job: Housing co-ordinator. He must see that workers in the mushrooming arms industry have places to live, will spend millions of U. S. funds to house them near their work.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)
What, No Beans?
Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—Sergt. Jay C. Ostrander, training with the National Guard at Fort McClellan, Ala., wrote his parents: "Next time you send a box put a pan of beans in it. We don't get any here."

Hero
South Bend, Ind.—Three-year-old Russell Wilson, Jr., saved his one-year-old brother, Richard, from burning to death. Their mother left him to watch the baby while she went to a grocery.

Garments on a line near the kitchen stove caught fire and fell into the crib. Russell snatched the child out, dragged him to the front porch and yelled. Neighbors called firemen, who put out the blaze and gave Richard first aid for severe burns on arms and legs. The baby wasn't hurt.

Head for Business
Kansas City—As two robbers fled his drug store with $30 in loot, Milford W. Loomis, night manager, grabbed a pistol and fired over their heads.

Police asked why he shot high. "I knew I couldn't hit them anyway, and besides, I saw one of our customers coming toward the store. I wouldn't want to hit a customer."

Glad Tidings
Lincoln, Neb.—A caller at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Foulke asked, "Is this the property to rent from Charlotte Alexander, or her estate?"

When they said, "Yes," the man told them:
"It belongs to you now."
Before her death, last month, Miss Alexander deeded the home they occupied to seven of her tenants.

Dismal Tidings
Iowa City, Ia.—Prof. George Haskell popped this question to University of Iowa coeds in his class:
"How much would you require a prospective husband to be earning before marrying him?"
Eighty-five per cent demanded $2,500 a year.
"Well," Haskell said, "less the 15 per cent of the income received in the nation earn more than $2,500 a year. So about 85 per cent of you can expect to be old maids."

Sugar Fuel Ample
In an emergency, South Africa can supply 42,000,000 gallons of motor fuel from its sugar plantations. This is more than a quarter of the annual needs, Johannesburg reports. The Natal Sugar Industry has given this estimate to the authorities after an extensive survey. Because the normal sources of gasoline might be cut off in the East if war swept that region, the South African Cane Growers obtained the survey.

N. Y. A. Center at Woodstock Now Aids National Defense

Expansion Plans Call for Several More Structures

Metal Shop Is Completed and Foundation Started for New Textile Plant on Site

National defense, which is of some concern to people of all ages in times of peace or threatening war, gained some momentum through efforts of the National Youth Administration long before Uncle Sam decided to roll up his sleeves and make a job of it.

Everywhere throughout the nation in work centers such as the one at Woodstock young people were being taught to use their hands and heads in a program designed for the future welfare of a progressive country, and now the N.Y.A. is bringing more immediate dividends than was expected at its inception.

All hands now at Woodstock and similar work centers are devoted to speeding up national defense production and some hands are experienced by virtue of the fact that the N.Y.A. had been in business for some time when the order was given for the greatest preparedness program in the history of America.

Youth, itself, is the chief power behind this great mobilization and the current call for speed is a challenge to the energy of the young.

Supplies Experience

The job of the N.Y.A. is mainly to supply work experience and with cooperation of educational units provide various training courses for young people of the nation, who without this agency, would remain unemployed.

This original purpose is still the main objective of the National Youth Administration but its place now in the new national plan is vastly more important than at the outset.

Perhaps now this agency, established in the interests of the young as a national recovery measure, has a chance to prove its worth and win a permanent place as a producing institution of the government.

It looks like something of a permanent settlement at Woodstock, at least, where at the outset of this new year an impressive program of expansion is under way.

New Building Ready

One new, bluestone building, to be used for providing work experience in the metal trades, now stands ready and the foundation is started on another large structure which will house machinery for production of textiles. The latter when finished will be the largest building on the 20-acre plot formerly owned by the Kingston City Water Department. The building housing machinery for production of woodwork, has been completed and in operation for several months and large orders for the federal government are now under way.

One order, for instance, calls for 41 sets of dining room furniture, 30 oak dining room tables and 328 benches. Similar orders have been coming in regularly and the young men now have a feeling that their efforts are useful to the government which provides them a chance to learn a trade.

Training for Girls

Within the near future 30 girls will arrive at the center for work experience in the textile trades and 20 boys are also scheduled to take up this work when the new building is completed.

The center by spring will be providing work experience for 130 young people and will rank as the third largest in the state.

The wheels of production by next summer should be moving full speed ahead and soon from the ranks of the group will come experienced young men and women who will be trained for a start in work essential to national defense.

Small groups of the young people at the Woodstock center also are gaining work experience in various other occupations. These include cooking, transportation, and office work and such specialties as sign painting and poster work.

Stone Cutting Taught

Stone-cutting with the sculptor, Thomas Penning, as instructor, is also being taught to a group of 10 boys at the center and this is a trade not found in many of the other centers throughout the nation.

On Mr. Penning's property in High Woods is also the present metal shop in which 22 young men are gaining work experience. This shop will be moved soon to the new building on the property near the woodworking plant.

The stone work is turned out in a small shop a few hundred feet from the woodworking plant and the boys here have made many interesting pieces such as bird baths for the Kingston parks, monuments of various types and many smaller pieces, expertly cut.

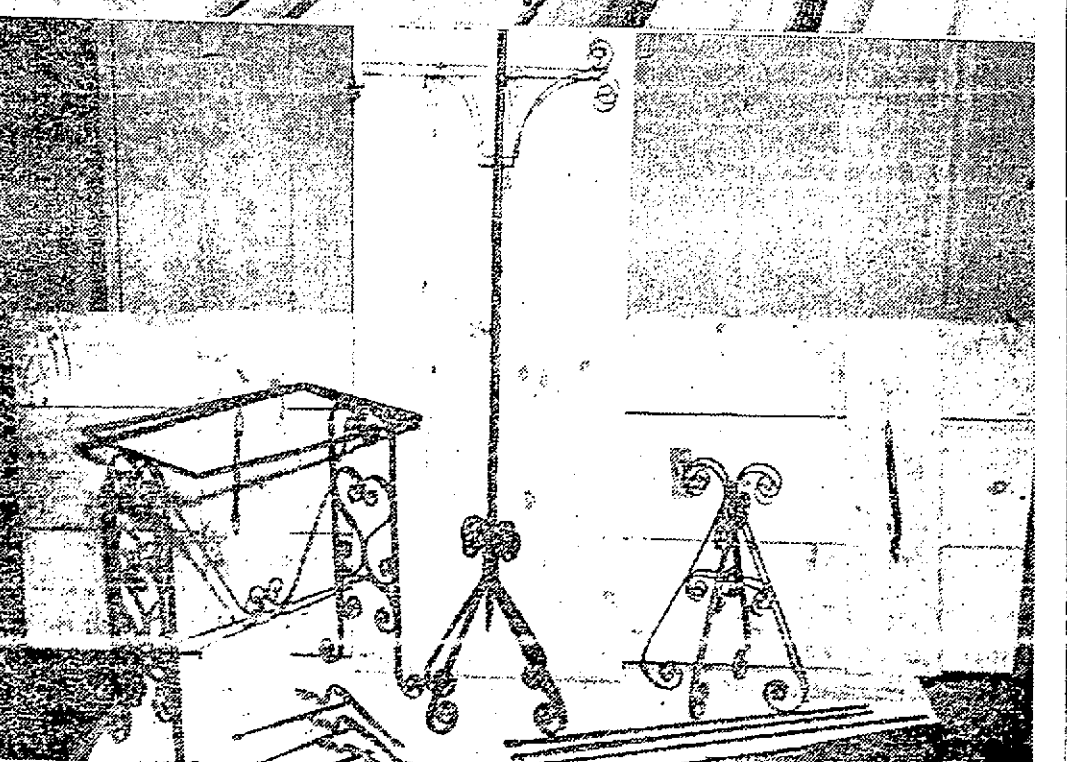

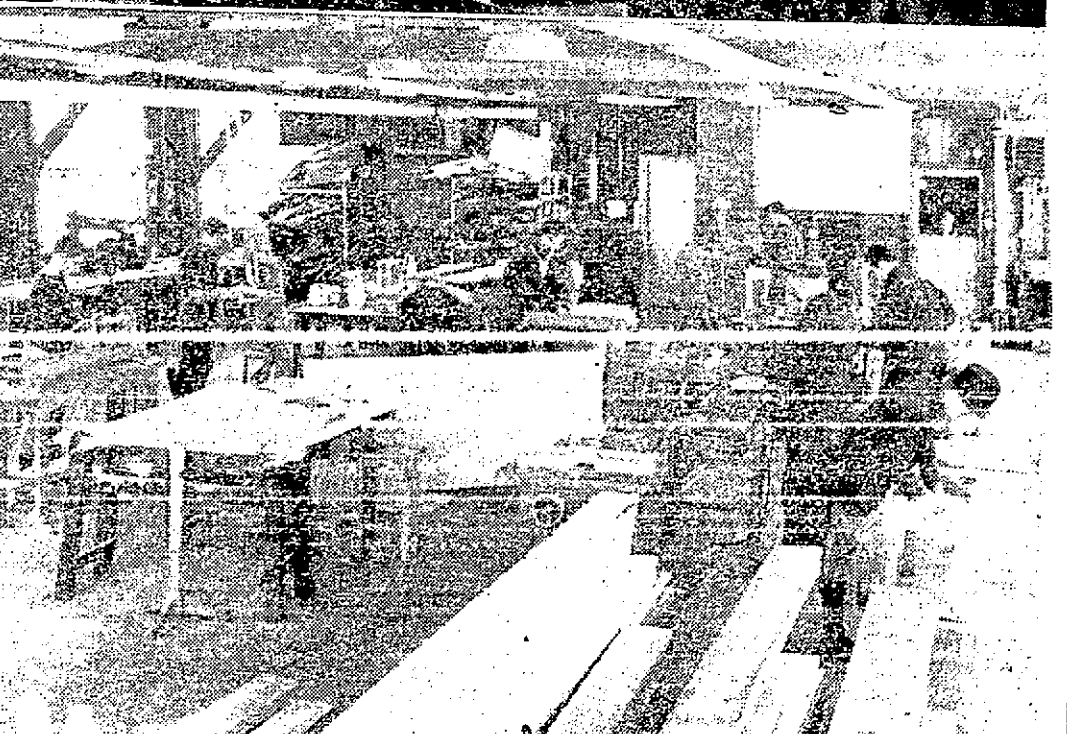

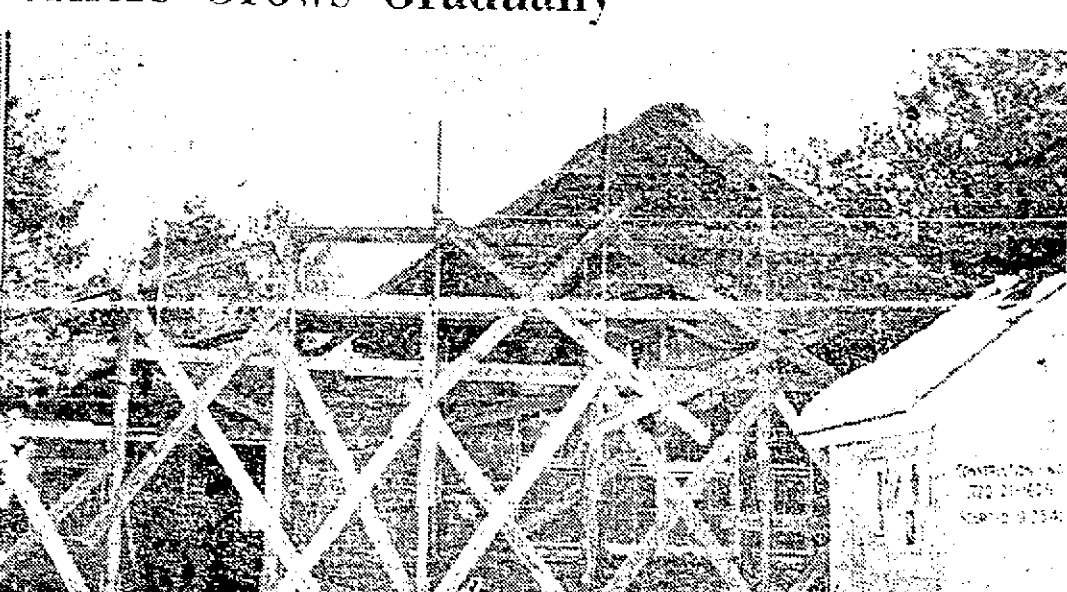

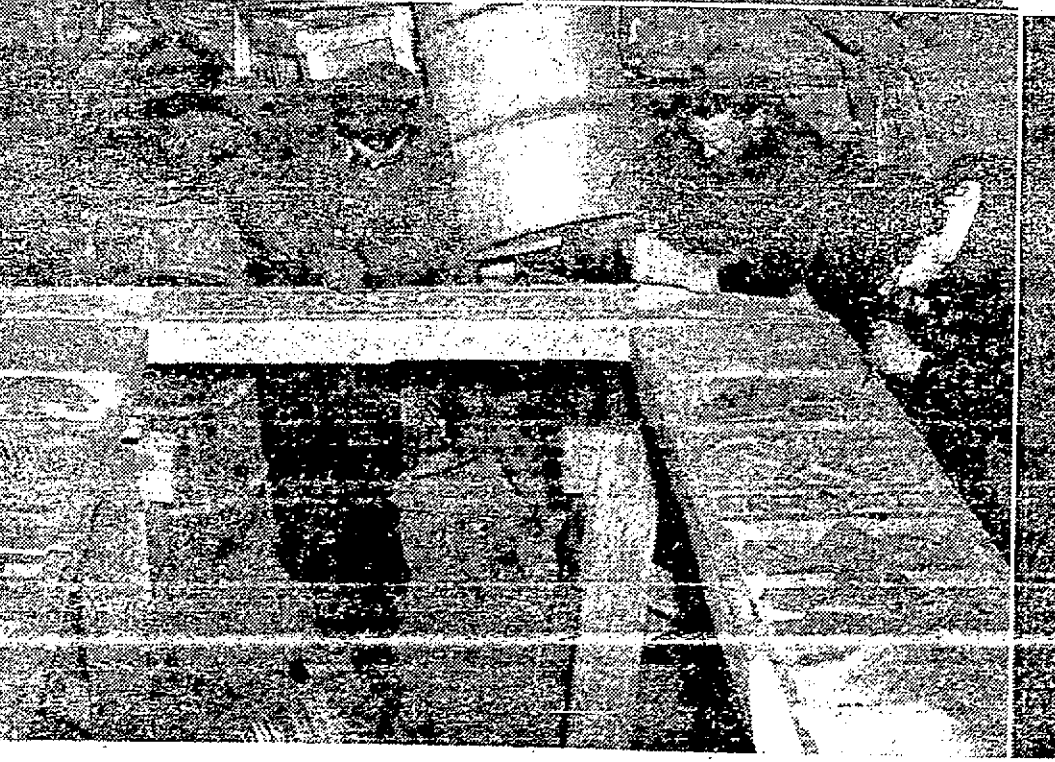

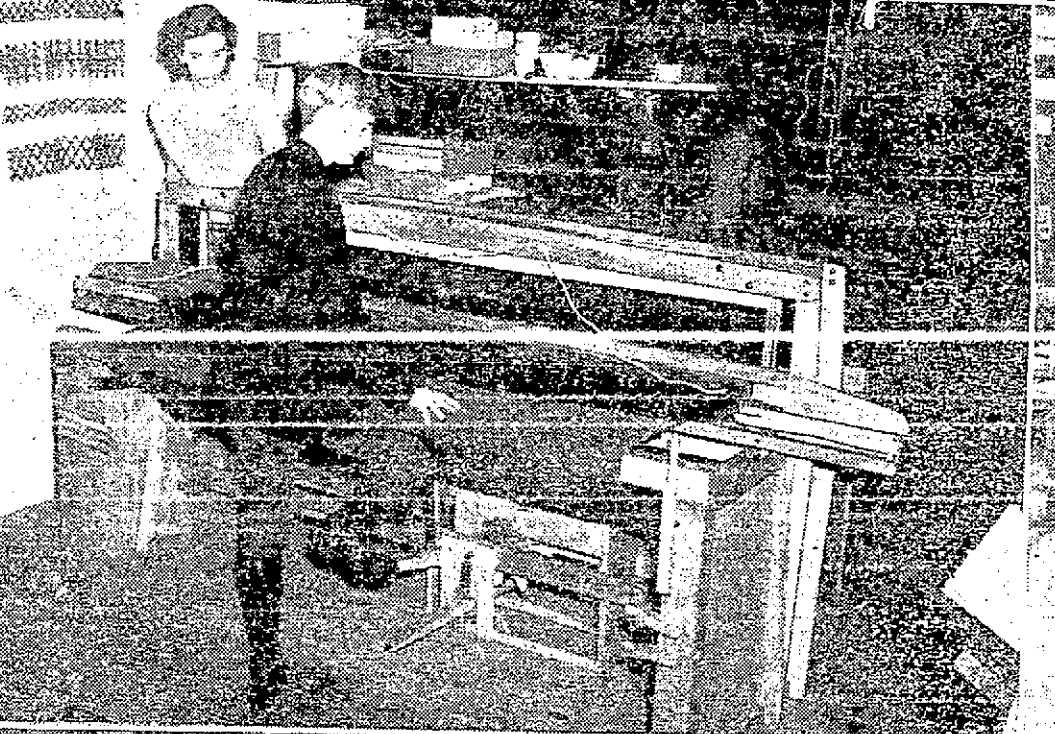

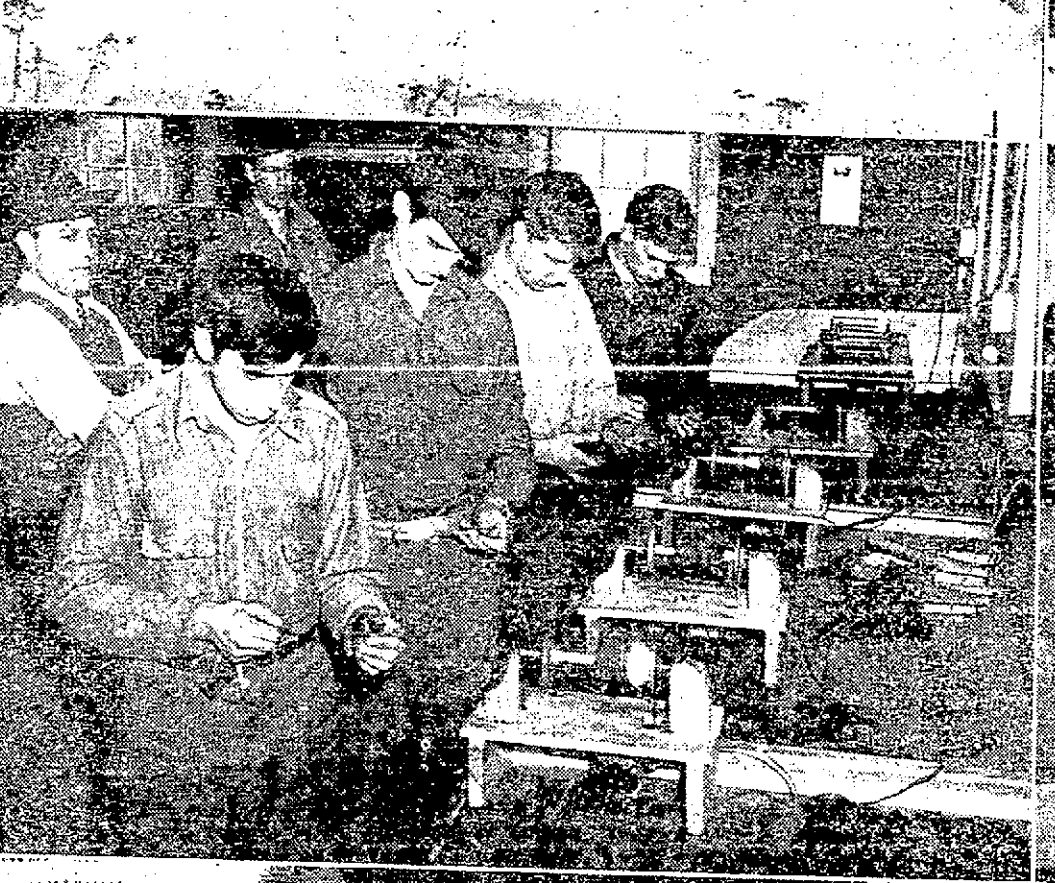

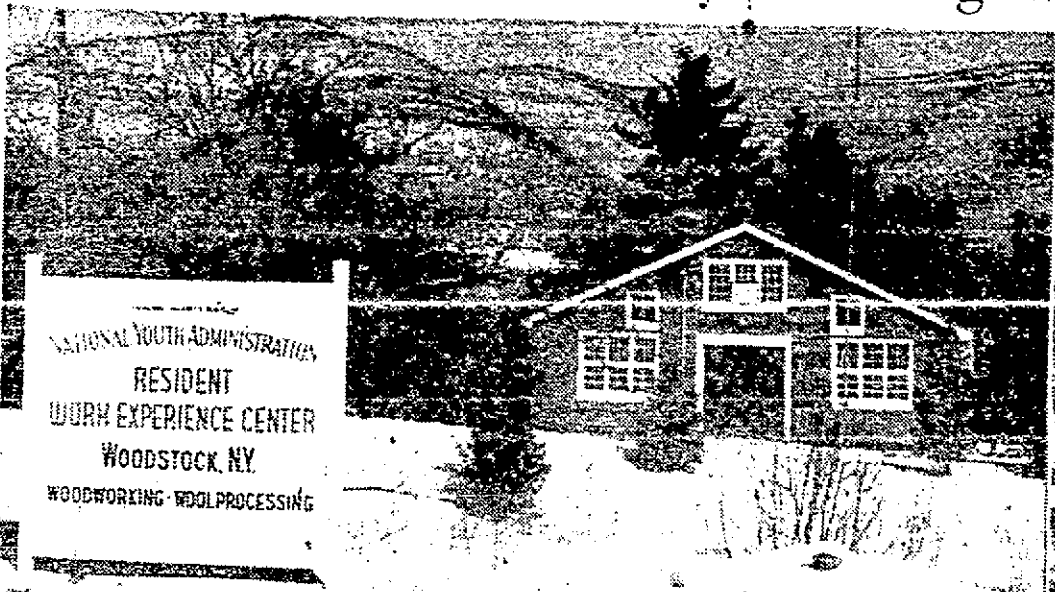

Ernest Braze, a well known Woodstock craftsman, is in charge of the woodworking plant and everything turned out there is of local design. One unit which should prove useful in the huge dining hall now set up in the nation is a table with adjustable legs which fold under and out of the way to allow for easy and compact stacking.

Furniture Made

Furniture for the local N.Y.A. center and for others throughout the state has been turned out at this plant, which is now equipped with 17 separate machines and is its own sawmill and a special tool room.

The textile division of the center is now being moved to the new building on the property near the woodworking plant.

Community of Young Workers Grows Gradually

One building has followed another at the Woodstock N. Y. A. Work Center since the first group of young people came there about two years ago and by the end of another year it is expected to be a producing community within itself. Shown above are several views of the center where the young people are engaged now in national defense work. At top left is a view of the Woodworking plant with picturesque Overlook Mountain in the background and a sign painted by one of the young men in the foreground. Similar signs are painted at present is set up in two separate shops which are considered a distance apart. In one the wool as shipped from federal surplus commodities warehouses is washed, dyed and spun into yarn under direction of Eugene Caille, who is an expert on textiles and wool.

In the other building, under supervision of Mrs. Karin Whitley, yarn is woven on looms into blanket material, suiting, curtain material and other such cloths useful in the program of national defense.

Both the wool project and the present small-scale textile plant will be moved into the building for which ground has been broken and which is expected to be well under way by the end of this year.

A group of N.Y.A. workers from Kingston, Saugerties and Glens Falls for other materials used under supervision of Thomas Goodman are at work on the new building site. They are finding the digging a man's job in the frost-laden ground and the work is not progressing as rapidly as it would in the warmer seasons. Mr. Goodman also supervised the building of the Kingston Municipal Stadium and the one at Saugerties.

To Build Kilo The present expansion program also calls for the building of a large drying kiln near the woodworking plant and the moving of the sawmill to a more advantageous position. The lumber used in this division of the work is shipped from the various C.C.C. camps of the area and there is always enough at hand for the work.

Equipment in the metal shop includes ten lances, lathes, drills, hammers and other tools and machines used in metal work.

on the various projects are placed with local concerns and in this way the center is an asset also to area business.

The center has three trucks and a suburban for its hauling and transportation and it was announced this week that a bus was on its way to Woodstock as a new transportation unit.

Such centers throughout the state are on a self-sufficient basis as any group of young people could be. About everything which can be made is turned out on the premises, and in the woodworking shop various units of machinery used, as well as the building, were constructed by the young men.

Equipment in the metal shop includes ten lances, lathes, drills, hammers and other tools and machines used in metal work.

Ice tongs, hooks, locks, hinges, drills and punches and similar items are made in the shop. All tempering is done in the building.

To Move Equipment Before the end of the month all equipment in the temporary quarters of the temporary quarters will be moved into the new building where two new large lathes and other equipment will be installed. The lathes are now stored in a barn on the property.

More Work Ahead Blueprints already made reveal that there is still much work to be done on the property of the center and that when all buildings are completed the settlement will be a working community within itself.

Its various units are more or less scattered now pending completion of the proposed structures.

The boys' resident center is now at Allencrest in the village and another site away from the work center units will be leased as temporary quarters for the 30 girls pending completion of the planned building.

All activities at the center are under supervision of Richard S. Wallach and he is being assisted now by Kellogg Peckham, who is to act as assistant personnel director for 16 weeks.

The center when completed as planned will virtually represent an industry of considerable importance in the township of Woodstock and as a government project it is due for some occasional nationwide attention.

It has been honored already by visits from Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, first lady of the United States, and time ago she placed an order for some of the wool turned out in the textile shop. This in itself represents a history-making start for the N.Y.A. in Ulster county, and perhaps it helps to indicate that there are important things ahead.

Lodge to Entertain The Kingston Lodge No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, will be host to the visiting lodges from Poughkeepsie, Newburgh and Peekskill Sunday in the second series of a tournament to determine the championship of the Hudson Valley in inter-club activities. Kingston was first honors. Pool, darts and other sports activities are listed for Sunday's program. Following the matches a buffet will be served. The tournament is being held at the Kingston Hotel.

The United States' new naval base at Bermuda will be 780 miles from New York.

KINGSTON NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 8, 1941.

HIRING THE MIDDLE-AGED

Senator Mead of New York has been asking for a Senate investigation of "discrimination against older workers in employment with the government and with defense industries." In connection with this action, Secretary of Labor Perkins observes that many private industries are "still holding to a low hiring age limit."

She tells, however, of a California aircraft company taking on several hundred men from 50 to 65 years old when she suggested such a remedy for lack of skilled help. Also of a Baltimore aircraft company getting 300 "badly needed machinists" by modifying its hiring policy to take in older age groups.

This is a good time for employers generally to move in the same direction. During the years of slack employment, when employers could take their pick of youth and middle age, it was natural, perhaps, to give youth the advantage and penalize age. But it was tragically unfortunate in its effects on people ranging from 40 to 60 years. And not only were countless lives made harder by such discrimination, but employers often were really discriminating against themselves by refusing to hire men or women whose age had given them valuable experience and competency.

It would be a blessing to this nation if the whole problem of age as a factor in employment could now be worked out according to some rational and humane system.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

"We might well remember," says Dr. John Fairbank of Harvard University, "in the midst of our excitement over foreign affairs and foreign policy now in this country, that our fundamental problems remain within."

Well, as our Socratic radio questioners say, "true or false?" Are our biggest problems today domestic or foreign?

A general view of newspaper headlines and editorials and magazine features may suggest to most of us that American interests today are primarily foreign. It seems to be big foreign situations and problems, rather than domestic situations and problems, that are "played up" in the news and that people are reading and talking about.

It is about the same in serious radio broadcasts. Even when discussions and news reports have to do with American subjects, they are usually related to the war. The foreign background is always there. Most of our commentators on public affairs seem convinced that what is occurring in Europe and Asia is more important to us than anything we are voluntarily doing at home.

The great war crisis sets the stage and sets the pace, and we tag along trying to understand it and to suffer as little harm as possible.

B-1 FOR CHINA

A United States gunboat arrived at Canton, China, the other day loaded with ammunition to fight beriberi. Beriberi is a serious disease caused by lack of certain essential elements in the diet. It used to be counteracted by supplying the foodstuffs containing the needed nutrients, although it was not known at first just why such foods did the job.

Today doctors know the important factor is a vitamin. They know also that it can be supplied quicker and in larger amounts by giving synthetic, concentrated vitamins. So the ammunition the gunboat Mindanao carried was a cargo of 100,000 capsules of vitamin B-1. They will be used in Chinese hospitals, and they should be followed by other loads of the same.

It is reassuring to find science and research aiding in such an important lifesaving work in a time and place where they are also used for wholesale destruction.

HUMOR AND SENSE

There is much to be said for American humor as a safety valve. As Dr. Allen A. Stockdale of the National Association of Manufacturers told a banquet audience recently, America's democratic sense of good humor is an aid to national health and safety.

Whether it is also, as he said, "more important than any other device" might be questioned.

There are some problems that can't be laughed off, although the ability to ease tensions with humor may greatly aid the success of their serious consideration. The perpetual kiddie may make as bad mistakes as the humorless man. But we certainly need more humor in our discussion of public affairs today—enough humor to keep us from calling our opponents names and to open our eyes to our own foibles. That would clear the air of some hampering emotion and let us get at the job in hand.

The world laughed at Hitler—but failed to stop his advance to power or to see his program clearly. Today a lot of people have jumped from the point of view that held him to be only a ridiculously funny creature, to complete fear of him or acceptance of his might. The earlier humor needed the companionship of hard sense. The current, fatalistic fear calls for both humor and common sense to cure it.

Remember how college professors and presidents used to be razed. And now they're sought everywhere for public jobs.

We Americans, after due consideration, will give an overwhelming mass of grudging support to England.

It would be great if some power would give Hitler the gift to see himself as others see him.

Men used to beat their plowshares into swords; now they beat old freight cars into bombing planes.

It still seems to be a toss-up as to whether the meek or the mighty will inherit the earth.

CANCER NOT DUE TO A GERM

As a student I was taught by the professor of pathology that cancer was due to some tissues of the body not being fully developed at birth and that some, forty years after birth these tissues became irritated and started to grow. As they had some forty years of growth to make up, they multiplied very rapidly and in a disorderly arrangement.

At the same time the professor of surgery stated that he didn't know the cause of cancer, but that in his opinion it was caused by a germ, which germ would be discovered in the days to come.

That cancer is not caused by a germ is the opinion of cancer experts "the factors causing the abnormal process of cell growth called cancer are multiple or more than a single factor, whereas there is a single germ or organism causing infection. This is why human cancer is not infectious or contagious."

Other factors pointing away from infection as a cause of cancer but showing that there are a number of factors causing it are:

1. All evidence in cancer occurring in human beings and animals points to irritation, usually prolonged irritation, as being an important factor in causing cancer.

2. Once the cancer process has started, the factors causing the cancer may be removed but the cancer will continue to grow, which is, of course, different from what happens when a germ-organism causes infection.

3. The constitution or make-up of the individual, the condition of the glands, play some part in causing cancer.

The point about the above is that no one type of research worker—chemist, pathologist, surgeon, gland specialist or other—now works alone on the problem of cancer; each of these research workers contributes something every year. It is for this reason that governments and private individuals give cancer research institutions liberal grants of money as it is recognized that well-equipped laboratories and workers representing all the branches of medicine are necessary if the cause and cure of cancer is to be found.

It is possible to get the jump on barberry bushes in recently settled areas before they spread the stem-rust disease of grains, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. WPA labor has been used widely in recent years to eradicate barberries in areas where there are many bushes. Smaller crews of better-trained men are used to scout in more sparsely settled regions. In northern Wisconsin, which was settled many years later than the southern part, a few bushes were planted on the new farmsteads. These bushes had not spread to the fields to any great extent. The crews scouted mostly around the farmsteads. Only when they found barberry bushes planted was it necessary to inspect the land within a 2 or 3 mile zone. A check on this type of barberry survey in northern Wisconsin showed that crews missed few bushes, though they inspected only about a quarter of the whole area.

More Early Spring Fiction

In 1939 that Dalton Trumbo, who now lives and writes on a hilltop ranch in California, started the literature with a book called "Johnny Got His Gun." It was a good novel and a horrifying experience and it gained its author some group's award as the "most original novel of the year." This was pleasant for Mr. Trumbo, but it put him under an obligation. His next novel could hardly be less original.

It isn't either. It is called "The Remarkable Andrew" and it is the story of how the ghost of Andrew Jackson went to Shale City, Colo., and there was a great help to a young, and flesh and blood man by name of Andrew Long. Inserting a ghost into a book is not exactly new, to be sure, but using him as Mr. Trumbo uses the Saviour of New Orleans is original. The novel has gusto, a fine setting, and some of the most amusing dialogue the year will produce.

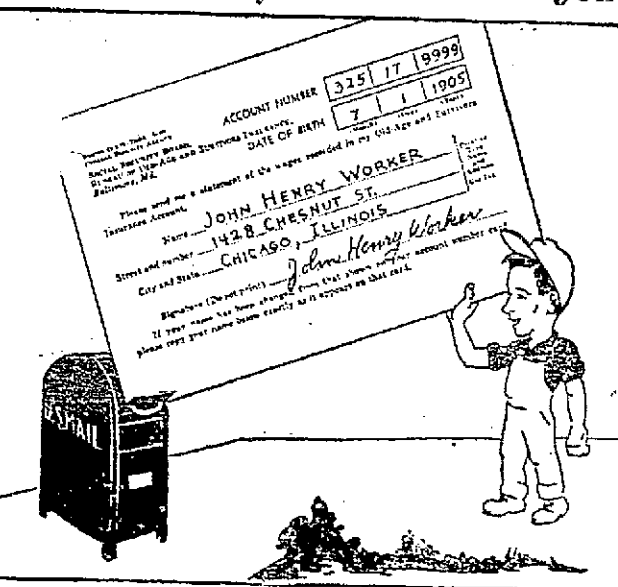

Paul Engle is one of the two or three living Americans who has written best selling poetry. That was some time ago; the last few years he has been lecturing on poetry at the University of Iowa and writing his first novel. It is called "Always the Land," and it is written straight out of Mr. Engle's youth. The Engles were horse people, and the characters of his novel are horse people and farmers, mostly the lusty, salty kind. Although the writing is not poetic in the sense that Josephine Johnson's is, Mr. Engle's text combines remarkably the virtues of poetry and prose, and his ear for the speech of his fellow Iowans is keen.

For those who like a little murder in their reading, Kenneth Fearing has provided "Dagger of the Mind." This is not a conventional mystery, nor a conventional anything else. It is a story of the effect of murder on a designated odd group of people in one of those colonies established to give "creative artists" a chance to create. It is full of hard boiled dialogue and hard hitting phrases, and those who remember Mr. Fearing's "The Hospital" will not be disappointed in his new book.

Nor will admirers of Herbert Ravenseau's "Emperor Brimble," which is again a historical novel, this one based on an episode from Colonial days in South Carolina. The book is dramatic, and what is probably more important, it is a period piece with the flavor of life, not of the museum, about it.

Social Security and the New Job

Employee who wants to check the amount of wages recorded in his old-age and survivors insurance account mails a wage-inquiry card to the Social Security Board. He got the card from his local Social Security Board office.

Many workers are now changing jobs or taking their first jobs as a result of the national defense program. Most of these jobs are covered by old-age and survivors insurance under the Social Security Act.

James L. Burck, manager of the Kingston Social Security Board office at the Post office building has prepared a series of eight leaflets, one for each step in the steps each worker should now take in connection with his social security account to avoid delays or difficulties when he or his family are ready to collect insurance benefits.

Any worker who does not have a social security account number card can obtain one at the Social Security Board office.

No. 4

For a worker who wants to check the amount of wages credited to his social security account, the Social Security Board has established a very easy procedure. He can get a wage-inquiry card from any Social Security Board office. This is a printed card addressed to the central office of the Social Security Board and requires only a one-cent stamp. On the front of the card is space for the employee to fill in his social security account number, the date of his birth, and his name and address.

If a worker has any reason to doubt that reports of his wages have been complete and accurate, he should get a wage-inquiry card from his local Social Security Board office, fill it in, and mail it in. For instance, if the worker has had more than one social security number, he should send in a wage-inquiry card to see if all of his wages have been credited to his

Deductions for Business Expenses

Deductions for business expenses form a large item in the return of many taxpayers and must have certain qualities to be allowed. Such deduction must be for an expenditure in connection with the maintenance and operation of the taxpayer's business or business properties; it must be an ordinary expense and it must be a necessary expense. In insisting upon the latter qualifications, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is upheld by the Board of Tax Appeals and the courts. Ordinary and necessary expenses are only those which are usual and essential in the case of similar taxpayers, and do not include extraordinary and nonessential expenses.

Typical business expenses of a mercantile establishment are amounts paid for advertising, hire of clerks and other employees, rent, light, heat, water, stationery, stamps, telephone, property insurance, and delivery expenses. The expenses of a manufacturing business include labor, supplies, repairs, light and heat, power, selling cost, administration, and similar charges.

The farmer may deduct all necessary expenses incurred in the production, harvesting, and marketing of crops, including labor, cost of seed and fertilizer used, cost of minor repairs to farm buildings (other than his dwelling), and small tools used up in the course of a year or two. A taxpayer conducting more than one business may claim the business deductions of each.

Roosevelt's Press Conference Statement on Public Works Projects Provides Interesting Subject for Future

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 8.—Maybe President Roosevelt didn't intend to convey any particular significance by his answer to a question at his press conference this week about the prospect of a large public works program in the event that the war comes to a sudden end, but it is, nevertheless, to be observed that such plans are in the making.

Again and again, as the conversation in the national capital turns to the possibilities of events overseas, the emphasis seems to be on whether Britain can be invaded this spring. Actually the emphasis is turning toward another possibility—suppose Britain holds out staunchly and the German people begin to wonder what they'll be in for in 1942.

The stories of German invincibility have been so widely told and they are being repeated before congressional committees so frequently by witnesses favoring the defeat of the lend and lease bill that the other possibility—a sudden collapse inside Germany—gets relatively little attention.

But so far as planning is concerned for the economic future of the United States, the most penetrating event that could happen would be the breakdown of Nazi Germany. For it would be quite contrary to the effect of Nazi invasion of Britain. Even if the Nazis overwhelmed the British, the United States would keep on making war weapons and building airplanes for defense, but if the Nazi regime is overthrown or disintegrates, the American people would be likely to demand a cessation of armament building.

Such a contingency would mean repercussions of far-reaching intensity because the whole economic system today is buttressed by spending for defense purposes and, if the Nazis are beaten, it would seem superfluous to keep on spending for war preparations. America to be sure has nothing to fear from a British victory.

Though there is no basis at present on which to predicate prediction of German defeat, it is realized that by the end of the summer of 1941, if the British hold out, the disappointment in Germany will be profound. Herr Hitler has been promising complete victory in a short space of time. First he expected to be in London in August and then he shifted to September, and now he is letting it be known through the controlled press that American aid cannot possibly reach Britain in time, for the Nazis expect to vanquish the British before the end of 1941.

Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASH DAYBOOK—FEB.—8

Washington—Down at Henderson, Ky., they call him "Hubby."

"Hubby" Kimmel.

Of course they expected him to make some kind of a mark for himself. The husbands and the Kimmels were in the habit of doing that in the army. The trait dated back to the revolution.

But Hubby muffled his valedictorian speech when he was graduated from high school. He is the smallest of the Kimmels, too, a bit of the dumpy side compared to the rest.

Today, short-spoken Hubby Kimmel is the new admiral of all three of Uncle Sam's fleets, especially the real one out in the Pacific. He has given all the husbands and Kimmels something to shoot at.

Down Henderson way, they tell me, folks are remembering things about him that pointed the way to his later success in the navy—things they hardly noticed when Hubby was a kid.

For instance, he got hold of some engineering instruments and surveyed a farm from outhouse to creek bank while he was still in high school.

"It was correct, too," says Singleton, Hubby's mother, who still holds forth at the old family homestead.

They will tell you "Hubby" denies that he forgot that high school speech. After the diplomas were given out and the family had gone home, "Hubby's" father told him to task for not shining more brightly. "To think," he snorted, "that a Kimmel would forget his speech!"

"Check," the lad exploded, "I didn't forget a word of it. I just talked so fast that I ran out of breath."

Was Longing For Action

The last time he was home in Henderson, he confided to his brother that he was restive chained to a desk job in Washington.

"Hell's fire," said the admiral, "if they don't order me out, I'll go to sea anyway."

Admiral Kimmel first met his Commander-in-Chief, Franklin Roosevelt, in 1915 when Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy. Kimmel was Roosevelt's personal aide for a while, and they've been friends ever since.

The admiral is still silent "Hubby" Kimmel, even to his own immediate family. In her apartment here in Washington, Mrs. Kimmel makes no bones about it.

"Who," she says, "one day his photograph in dress uniform was delivered here. I noticed he wore two medals. That was the first I knew he had any medals. Even got them for me what he

BOY SCOUT NEWS

The Ulster-Greene Council is joining with the 551 councils in the United States in celebrating the 45th anniversary of the founding of the Scout movement in America.

Some of the events which the scouts will participate in during the week are: Today at 7:30 p. m., President Roosevelt and James E. West, Chief Scout executive, with Walter W. Head, president of the national council will be heard on a national broadcast and the troops and Scouts will rededicate themselves to scouting by repeating their Scout oath when Chief West leads them. The troops of this council will be gathered at their troop and patrol meeting places to hear this broadcast.

Tomorrow all troops will be attending church service and several districts have planned union services for the evening. At each of these gatherings the Scouts are asked to observe a minute of silent tribute to Lord Baden-Powell, founder of scouting.

Tuesday evening Troops No. 40 of Athens and No. 6 of Kingston are holding their annual father and sons banquets. Wednesday Lincoln's birthday, is a holiday and several troops have reported that they are planning on a winter hike at which time they will distribute feed for the birds and game.

Thursday Dr. M. Hammond of Catskill will address the Kiwanis Club of Kingston and his talk will be broadcast. Dr. Hammond is vice chairman of the northern district and a member of the executive board. The western district court of honor at West Shokan will convene that same evening.

Friday the Kingston district court of honor will be held at the court house on Wall street at 8 p. m. at which time all Scouts of this district will receive advancements in rank. The public is invited to these Scout events. Sunday evening Troop No. 27 of Ellenville is planning a investiture ceremony for new scouts in connection with their evening service at the Reformed Church.

Kimmel is the tale about his swearing off the sea forever at the tender age of 13, just as his rowboat capsized in Ohio river. But he had to break his oath when his congressman ran out of West Point appointments. He went to Annapolis.

Administrative genius, insatiable curiosity about his ships, uncanny powers of observation, gunnery perfection and morale building efficiency are Admiral Kimmel's invisible badges of success, his mates say.

He was slightly wounded in the 1915 Mexican trouble. He taught the British a thing or two about gunnery in the North Sea with his own range finding gadget.

Most of his forebears are steeped in military tradition from the Revolution on down. His wife's a daughter of an admiral. Two sons are in the navy, the most dangerous of posts — each a marine commander. The third has eyes too weak for sea duty.

HIRING THE MIDDLE-AGED

Senator Mead of New York has been asking for a Senate investigation of "discrimination against older workers in employment with the government and with defense industries." In connection with this action, Secretary of Labor Perkins observes that many private industries are "still holding to a low hiring age limit."

She tells, however, of a California aircraft company taking on several hundred men from 50 to 65 years old when she suggested such a remedy for lack of skilled help. Also of a Baltimore aircraft company getting 300 "badly needed machinists" by modifying its hiring policy to take in older age groups.

More Early Spring Fiction

In was in 1939 that Dalton Trumbo, who now lives and writes on a hilltop ranch in California, started the literature with a book called "Johnny Got His Gun." It was a good novel and a horrifying experience and it gained its author some group's award as the "most original novel of the year."

This was pleasant for Mr. Trumbo, but it put him under an obligation. His next novel could hardly be less original.

It isn't either. It is called "The Remarkable Andrew" and it is the story of how the ghost of Andrew Jackson went to Shale City, Colo., and there was a great help to a young, flesh and blood man by name of Andrew Long. Inserting a ghost into a book is not exactly new, to be sure, but using him as Mr. Trumbo uses the Saviour of New Orleans is original. The novel has gusto, a fine swing, and some of the most amusing dialogue the year will produce.

Paul Engle is one of the two or three living Americans who has written best selling poetry. That was some time ago; the last few years he has been lecturing on poetry at the University of Iowa and writing his first novel. It is called "Always the Land" and it is written straight out of Mr. Engle's youth. The Engles were horse people, and the characters of his novel are horse people and farmers, mostly the lusty, salty kind. Although the writing is not poetic in the sense that Josephine Johnson's is, Mr. Engle's text combines remarkably the virtues of poetry and prose, and his ear for the speech of his fellow Iowans is keen.

For those who like a little murder in their reading Kenneth Fearing has provided "Dagger of the Mind." This is not a conventional mystery, nor a conventional anything else. It is a story of the effect of murder on a designated odd group of people in one of those colonies established to give "creative artists" a chance to create. It is full of hard boiled dialogue and hard hitting phrases, and those who remember Mr. Fearing's "The Hospital" will not be disappointed in his new book.

Nor will admirers of Herbert Ravenel Sass' previous work be disappointed in "Emperor Brims," which is again a historical novel, this one based on an episode from Colonial days in South Carolina. The book is dramatic, and what is probably more important, it is a period piece with the flavor of life, not of the museum, about it.

Social Security and the New Job

Employee who wants to check the amount of wages recorded in his old-age and survivors insurance account mails a wage-inquiry card to the Social Security Board. He got the card from his local Social Security Board office.

Many workers are now changing jobs or taking their first jobs as a result of the national defense program. Most of these jobs are covered by old-age and survivors insurance under the Social Security act.

Charles E. Burke, manager of the Kingston Social Security Board office at the Post Office Building, has prepared a series of eight brief articles for The Freeman explaining the steps each worker should now take in connection with his social security account to avoid delays or difficulties when he or his family are ready to collect insurance benefits.

Any worker who does not have a social security account number card can obtain one at the Social Security Board office.

No. 4

For a worker who wants to check the amount of wages credited to his social security account, the Social Security Board has established a very easy procedure. He can get a wage-inquiry card from any Social Security Board office. This is a printed card addressed to the central office of the Social Security Board and requires only a one-cent stamp. On the front of the card is space for the employee to fill in his social security account number, the date of his birth, and his name and address.

If a worker has any reason to doubt that reports of his wages have been complete and accurate, he should get a wage-inquiry card from his local Social Security Board office, fill it in, and mail it. For instance, if the worker has had more than one social security number, he should send in a wage-inquiry card to see if all of his wages have been credited to his proper account. Or if a worker has changed jobs frequently, he may not have taken the precaution to see that each employer had his name and account number exactly as they are shown on his account number card. In this case he should check his social security account by sending in a wage-inquiry card.

From January 1, 1940 employers have been required to furnish each employee with a statement of his wages at least once a year or whenever the worker leaves his job. Workers should keep these statements as evidence of their credits toward old-age and survivors insurance.

Bolivia Ships Much Tin

World demand for tin is clearing out all of Bolivia's great piles of tin, which grew during negotiations for their sale to the United States and England. Much has been shipped to Chilean ports to await shipment to other countries. In one month recently shipments increased 1,200 tons to 4,860. Probably 3,600 to 4,000 tons will be exported monthly. This is a marked increase over the pre-war months of 1939.

Politics, War Barred

Brazil director of internal revenues has announced in Rio de Janeiro that employees of his department must not stop work to gather and discuss national politics, religion or war and recommended that they not leave their desks to open any conversation.

Roosevelt's Press Conference Statement on Public Works Projects Provides Interesting Subject for Future
By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 8.—May be President Roosevelt didn't intend to convey any particular significance by his answer to a question at his press conference this week about the prospect of a large public works program in the event that the war comes to a sudden end, but it is, nevertheless, to be observed that such plans are in the making.

Again and again, as the conversation in the national capital turns to the possibilities of events overseas, the emphasis seems to be on whether Britain can be invaded this spring. Actually the emphasis is turning toward another possibility—suppose Britain holds out staunchly and the German people begin to wonder what they'll be in for in 1942?

The stories of German invincibility have been so widely told and they are being repeated before congressional committees so frequently by witnesses favoring the defeat of the lend and lease bill that the other possibility—a sudden collapse inside Germany—gets relatively little attention.

But so far as planning is concerned for the economic future of the United States, the most penetrating event that could happen would be the breakdown of Nazi Germany. For it would be quite contrary to the effect of a Nazi invasion of Britain. Even if the Nazis overwhelmed the British, the United States would keep on making war weapons and building airplanes for defense, but if the Nazi regime is overthrown or disintegrated, the American people would be likely to demand a cessation of armament building.

Such a contingency would mean repercussions of far-reaching intensity because the whole economic system today is buttressed by spending for defense purposes and, if the Nazis are beaten, it would seem superfluous to keep on spending for war preparations. America to be sure has nothing to fear from a British victory.

Though there is no basis at present on which to predicate a prediction of German defeat, it is realized that by the end of the summer of 1941, if the British hold out, the disappointment in Germany will be profound. Herr Hitler has been promising complete victory in a short space of time. First he expected to be in London in August and then he shifted to September, and now he is letting it be known through the controlled press that American aid cannot possibly reach Britain in time, for the Nazis expect to vanquish the British before the end of 1941.

Washington—Down at Henderson, Ky., they call him "Hubby"—"Hubby" Kimmel.

Of course they expected him to make some kind of a mark for himself. The husbands and the Kimmels were in the habit of doing that in the army. The trait dated back to the revolution.

But Hubby muffed his vaudeville speech when he was graduated from high school. He is the snub of the Kimmels, too, a bit on the dumpy side compared to the rest.

Today, short-spoken Hubby Kimmel is the new admiral of all three of Uncle Sam's fleets, especially the real one out in the Pacific. He has given all the husbands and Kimmels something to shoot at.

Down Henderson way, they tell me, folks are remembering things about him that pointed the way to his later success in the navy. Things they hardly noticed when Hubby was a kid.

For instance, he got hold of some engineering instruments and surveyed a farm from outhouse to creek bank while he was still in high school.

"It was correct, too," says Singleton, Hubby's brother, who will distribute feed for the birds and game.

Thursday Dr. M. Hammond of Catskill will address the Kiwanis Club of Kingston and his talk will be broadcast. Dr. Hammond is vice chairman of the northern district and a member of the executive board. The western district court of honor at West Shokan will convene that same evening.

Friday the Kingston district court of honor will be held at the court house on Wall street at 8 p. m., at which time all Scouts of this district will receive advancements in rank. The public is invited to these Scout events. Sunday evening Troop No. 27 of Ellenville is planning a investiture ceremony for new scouts in connection with their evening service at the Reformed Church.

Kimmel is the tale about his swearing off the sea forever at the tender age of 15, just after his rowboat capsized in the Ohio river. But he had to break his oath when his congressman ran out of West Point appointments. He went to Annapolis.

Administrative genius, insatiable curiosity about his ships, uncanny powers of observation, gunner's perfection, and morale building efficiency are Admiral Kimmel's invisible badges of success, his mates say.

He was slightly wounded in the 1915 Mexican trouble. He taught the British a thing or two about gunnery in the North Sea with his own range finding gadget.

Most of his forebears are steeped in military tradition from the Revolution on down. His wife's a daughter of an admiral. Two sons are in the navy, the most dangerous of posts—submarine commanders. The third has eyes too weak for sea duty.

ALONG CAME CINDERELLA

By VIVIEN GREY

YESTERDAY, Lovely Day spent the day picking with Joe Hulse and another couple on the estate of Roger Cosgrave's parents along the Hudson above New York. They would have been asked to leave if Roger had not been fascinated by Lovely's blonde beauty. But when Lovely got back to her tenement home she found her sister Gert quarreling with her husband, Ring, and realized that as long as she stayed with them her sister would suffer. She is resting on the bench at the Grand Central station, relieving her life.

Chapter Four Sudden Excursion

AFTER that there had been jobs. Clerking in a bakery. In the five and dime. Attempting to learn millinery. But Lovely was smart enough to see that she'd not got in her hands the gift required for skilled work on hats or dresses. She really wasn't much at any sort of work. She would have liked modeling and would have worked hard at that. Or the stage. Or office work. But try as she might she was never able to connect with that sort of job.

And so Lovely had been in and out of jobs. Gert had always been patient and generous, slipping her money for things she needed, advising her gently and affectionately.

"Don't let life get you down, hon," she'd say. "You've got stuff. Looks and personality and a lot of things I never had. Don't let fear gang you into marrying a palooka. Play for something high. I mean a man with class and a wedding ring along with him. Make sure you get that too. I'll stake you, until you land, believe me."

And Gert had done her best. But Lovely knew she couldn't go on taking from Gert.

Sitting there in the terminal she wondered exactly what she would do. Sheer weariness closed her eyes and she slept for a while. When she woke she could see through the restaurant adjoining the waiting room another day had lighted the humid city streets. People were moving about hurriedly. Commuters rush hour was on.

Everyone seemed to have somewhere to go. Everyone but her. Lovely was seized with desire to be going somewhere herself.

That place up there in the country just beyond Croton. It had been heavenly. There was a little money in her purse. Joe had given it to her to buy some of the things for their picnic, about three times what he knew they would cost and had told her to keep the change.

"And I'm a man what means what he says. I don't want to see any of that filthy dough back again!" he'd warned her. That was his quaint way of giving her a little money from time to time. He knew she always needed it. Lovely smiled in reminiscence. Joe had his points. Solid, substantial dependable ones.

She opened the little soiled white purse her fingers almost ached from clutching. Two dollars and a little change left.

Dare she spend it on train fare when she knew she'd need food before the day was out? Lovely looked around at the hurrying people. The urge to be one of them was strong.

It was just then the thing was taken out of her hands and decided for her. A woman approached her with a smiling question. Lovely recognized the type. She knew instantly the woman represented some organization that would try to help her by sending her right back to Gert and Ring. So she heard herself saying valiantly and with quick wit:

"Oh, sure, I'm on my way to visit friends in Croton! I guess I must have slept too long on this bench and missed my train. Sure I've got money for my fare. See!" She opened the little purse with its two bills and bit of change.

"Guess I'd better get my ticket now."

And so that was the way it happened. The ticket cost nearly a dollar. Lovely was aware of the woman not too far away while she bought it. She was relieved when she was finally beyond the gate and no longer watched.

New World

THE ride straight up the Hudson was lovely. There was scarcely anyone in the train going north at that hour. Morning freshness lay over the scene outside her window.

Squatters in their funny patched shacks, clinging miraculously to the river banks just beginning to be about, set their fishing lines, feed their dogs, hang out their picture puzzle bedding.

On the zigzag porch of one shack a young girl was hanging up a gaudy wash. She moves, thought Lovely, like a breeze. As if she had never even heard of flats where windows look out only on dark alleys and smelly streets. Her skimpy dress, as she moved, left nothing to even the feeblest imagination. Near Tarrytown some little boys were tugging off their clothes just as swim in the cold water. Near an old factory building a woman fed a flock of chickens and ducks. The Shattamuc Yacht Club was coming alive.

She heard the brakeman call Croton. She was on the platform of the little station. Just a little way up the river—walking along the track would be the easiest way to get there—was the picnic spot, the spot where Roger Cosgrave had looked down at her and smiled and given Lovely her first glimpse of another world.

It had been like a door opening unexpectedly on a place lovelier than she had ever dreamed of. His voice. His way of speaking. His way of looking at her. All so different.

It was pleasant to sit on the hemlock needles, her arms clasped around her knees, and watch the river. Across the way the spires of a village were visible. There was a picture postcard prettiness about the whole thing, a faint tangy scent of evergreen, a lulling silence, not broken but made more profound by the soft swish of the needed branches over head. It was all that gave Lovely a sense of peace and closed her mind to the uncertainty of the immediate future.

"Did I leave you behind? Or am I dreaming?" Lovely recognized the voice instantly.

"I came back," she said simply, smiling up at Roger Cosgrave.

"Come back?" Curiosity in his voice as he dropped down beside her. "How come?"

"Yes, you see it's like this. When you have so many invitations you can't decide which one to accept and you're afraid of offending those you turn down, you run away to the country for a few days! Just like that!" Her hands moving in a gay gesture.

"I see," from Cosgrave who was regarding her with flustering interest. "So Lady Luck smiles on me."

"If you'd call it that," the brightness of her smile wearing down a little. Lovely was tired. She was beginning to know she hadn't eaten breakfast. Yet something about Roger Cosgrave gave her a safe, secure feeling that brought relaxation.

Bacon And Eggs

SHE looked down, sifting fragrant hemlock needles through her fingers. His gaze was a little too searching. Not unkind or critical. But too thorough. Lovely was afraid he was reading things in the little details of her. No fresh grooming. Exactly the same clothes. Evidence of weariness.

They talked a little. The estate the woodland was part of was his father's, had been his father's before him. There'd always been a Cosgrave there. And Haverstraw, the spires of which were visible across the river, was where Jim Farley came from. The sound of a bell tolling came clearly across the river as they listened. This was really Occawana—if you could call it a town. And a little way up the river was quaint Verplanck, an old fishing village, where every spring thousands of pounds of shad were taken from the water.

"I'd love to see it," dreamily from Lovely.

"You shall. Don't ever say anything you don't mean to me because I'll take you up instantly on it. But first I could do with some bacon with eggs on the side. And maybe a piece of toast with guava jelly and as many cups of coffee as the need of the moment dictates. And you're going with me."

He was on his feet, stretching out his hands to her. Lovely looked up, trying to smile over something perilously near tears.

"How did you know I was hungry?" she asked.

"Well," both standing, his eyes as he spoke just a little above the level of hers, "I saw a look in your eyes that made me think you and I might agree sometimes."

"Thank something for that look then if it means bacon and eggs!" There was no use pretending with any one, Lovely had decided long ago.

"We'll go up to the house and I'll get a car."

For the first time Lovely paused. She looked down at her slacks.

"Like this? I can't. Not to your house."

Roger considered a minute. It might be better for her introduction to the house to be a little different.

"Then wait around there on the stone wall at the drive," he said. "I'll be a minute."

He was as good as his word. The luxurious roadster was a far cry from the gaudy, rattling jalopy Lovely had driven that road in the night before. She sat beside the tanned youth with his air of acclimating wealth in a sort of trance. Could it be real?

Roger turned south on the Albany Post Road. Lovely looked at each stand they passed expectantly and was a little startled when he swung the car into the drive of Tumble Inn, gracious old stone pile rambling comfortably along a crag above the Hudson.

"Not a place like this in these old pants!" she protested.

"My dear, you look fit to be presented to Queen Elizabeth!" They were shown, and quite ceremoniously, to a table on the glass enclosed piazza, and no glances at Lovely's slacks! They had a sweeping view of the Hudson and fresh flowers in a low vase were brought to their table.

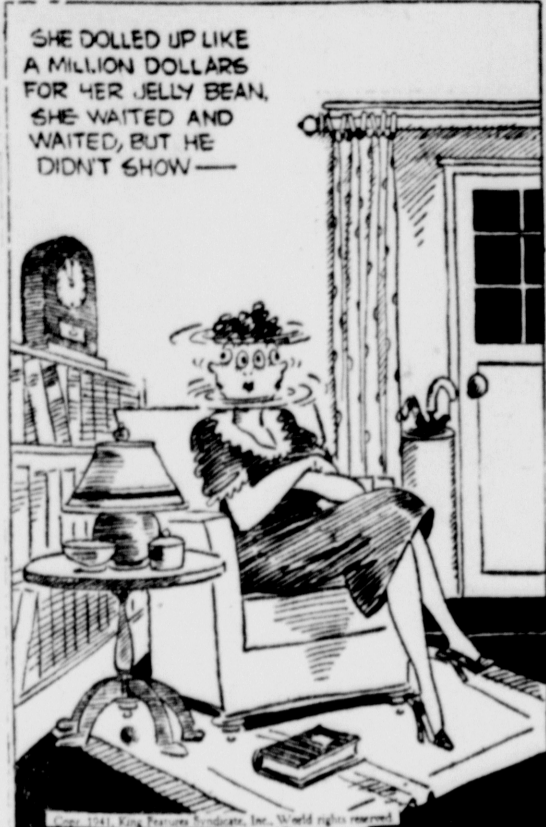

Roger sitting opposite, watching Lovely thought: She's lovely. Light moving on water, life unfolding in the petals of a flower. Wind blowing on tall sweet grass. A miracle.

Mid-Winter Rain

Floods Streets, Cellars in City

Flooded streets, sidewalks and cellars followed in the wake of the heavy rain storm that drenched Kingston on Friday afternoon when there was a total precipitation of 2.20 inches in the city, according to the records of the city engineer's office.

The storm was followed by a drop in the mercury which left streets and walks a glare of ice. In some streets the water formed in pools fully a foot in depth. Residents had trouble with flooded cellars.

Banks of snow that lined both sides of the sidewalks in many sections of the city caused pools of water to form on the walks through which pedestrians were forced to wade.

Acting Superintendent Max Oppenheimer of the Board of Public Works said this morning that sewer crews had worked all night opening catch basins. He said that it was due to the fact that many catch basins had been opened previous to the storm that conditions were not as bad as in other years when similar heavy rains had swept the city.

The temperature in the city during the afternoon yesterday while the storm was at its height was 43 degrees, and mild temperatures

Sons of Legion Install New Officers for Year
Kingston Squadron, No. 150, Sons of the American Legion, held installation of officers and a banquet on Thursday evening in the Legion Memorial Building.
The officers installed were: Frank Sass, sergeant-at-arms; John F. Jordan, historian; Arthur Brew, chaplain; Henry L. Kingsburg, adjutant; Vincent Winter, finance officer; William Reilly, second lieutenant; John Heidcamp, first lieutenant; Donald Riehl, captain.
Past Commander L. C. Elmenor presented the squadron with a citation for membership for 1940, and also presented a gold plaque citation.
Past captain buttons and badges were presented to William R. Murray, Robert Messinger and Robert Simpkins.
Chief of Police Charles Phinney was the speaker at the banquet and said that it was a privilege to talk to the youth of the city. The boys of today were the men of tomorrow, he said.
In this present age, said the chief, it is difficult to obtain a position in the federal, state or municipal departments unless a civil service examination was taken. If you have ever been convicted of a crime, said the chief, it would prove a hazard to obtaining a civil service position.
Think clean and you will act clean, said the chief, do not chum around with boys who seemingly have no regard for law and order. If you do you may be tempted to commit a crime which would leave a stigma on your character. It is much pleasanter, said the chief, to be on the outside of a prison looking in, than inside looking out. Form good habits, urged the chief, go to church and be guided by your clergyman. Pay attention to your instructions in school, and by all means obey your parents.
Gather all the knowledge possible while you are young, said the chief, for it will be of great benefit to you as you become older.
In closing Chief Phinney said "prepare yourself at this time so that when you leave school you will get what your father got when he left the army, an honorable discharge and maintain that honor throughout your life. If that is done how happy your parents will be of you."
Attorney Peter H. Harp of New Paltz showed a number of movies that proved highly interesting.
Fred Schwenk, chairman of the following members of the Ladies' Auxiliary: Mrs. Schwenk, Mrs. Messinger, Mrs. Sills and Mrs. Krempner.

Mid-Winter Rain Floods Streets, Cellars in City

Flooded streets, sidewalks and cellars followed in the wake of the heavy rain storm that drenched Kingston on Friday afternoon when there was a total precipitation of 2.20 inches in the city, according to the records of the city engineer's office.

The storm was followed by a drop in the mercury which left streets and walks a glare of ice. In some streets the water formed in pools fully a foot in depth. Residents had trouble with flooded cellars.

Banks of snow that lined both sides of the sidewalks in many sections of the city caused pools of water to form on the walks through which pedestrians were forced to wade.

Acting Superintendent Max Oppenheimer of the Board of Public Works said this morning that sewer crews had worked all night opening catch basins. He said that it was due to the fact that many catch basins had been opened previous to the storm that conditions were not as bad as in other years when similar heavy rains had swept the city.

The temperature in the city during the afternoon yesterday while the storm was at its height was 43 degrees, and mild temperatures prevailed during the early hours of the evening.

The lowest temperature recorded during the night was 29 degrees according to the official city thermometer at the city hall.

Acting Superintendent Oppenheimer said that the sewer crews worked all night, and that a number of cellars in private homes which had filled with water were pumped out.

Along Broadway the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp. today had a crew of men at work with pumps pumping the water that filled the underground conduits.

This morning the sanding crews of the public works board were busy sanding dangerous street intersections and hills where icy conditions prevailed.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

Style Steps Aside for Instinct When the Young Set Dresses Up

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Editor

You don't find girls under 20 on best-dressed lists. But ask anybody don't they look prettiest in their clothes? Don't they have a way of putting the color together, a way of adding one or two gay gadgets to a costume, until everybody says, "How charming!"

Mrs. Carmel Snow, for many years editor of a smart magazine, told a New York fashion meeting: "In pre-war France the women of 35 or so were the ones who took pains about clothes, but in America, it's the young girls who actually care about clothes. They are the ones who care about clothes enough to study their own types and the new fashions. The college-agers are out to get their men, and this natural instinct makes them wise beyond their years and pocketbooks in matters of dress."

Young girls love fads, but they are not much concerned with high-style trends. If a full skirt flatters, they calmly pass up the slim silhouette. They originate and adapt, and end up looking smarter than their elders.

Know What Flatters

Young girls know that they and they alone can get away with sentimentality in dress. So for evening they choose young girl frocks in pretty pastels, made simply to flatter young figures. They wear flowers, real ones, in their hair, at their waists, on their wrists.

The coming season will be a good one for their purposes. Designers are putting emphasis on "pretty - pretty" party clothes. Starched marquisette is the fabric of the moment, with lace, net and silk chiffon as runners-up. Prints are pretty, too, splashed with true-to-life flowers in good clear colors.

They Love Flowers

Florists know the under-20's love flowers and they've worked out amusing but inexpensive flower ideas.

Designs for fresh flower valentines are on file at most florists' shops. A young man can pick the design he wants and wire an order for it by number to a florist in the city where his lady love lives.

New designs include fraternity pin corsages, with Greek letters outlined with leaves; heart-shaped flower hats with matching bracelets, flower ear muffs with heart charms attached; Juliet caps woven of flowers, and Hawaiian style leis.

Rose Is Tops

Most fashionable flower for spring is the rose. It's in full bloom everywhere—on silks, cottons, linens, and in real diamond jewelry.

A fresh flower valentine points up the sweetness of starched marquisette in palest blue. Demure styles like this, with modest sleeves, are young-girl favorites. The sentimental corsage is of a design one can order by wire.

It hasn't been so popular since the days when first the Empress Josephine and then Queen Victoria sponsored it.

In today's revival two old-fashioned varieties are outstanding—the cabbage rose and the camellia rose. These appear in new resort silks, in daytime cottons, in jeweled ear-clips and brooches.

Only the gardeners are behind-hand. These giant-size roses have long been out of fashion in actual gardens. So for corsages, florists have to "build" them, wiring together the petals of several roses to make one big flower.

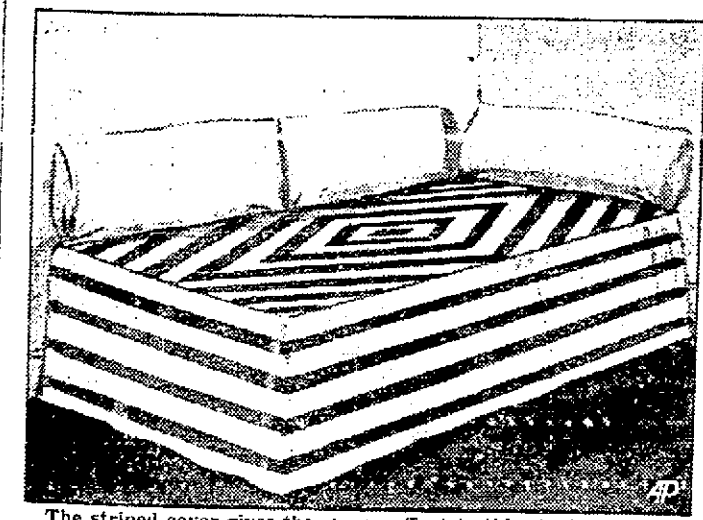

You Can Make It—A Square Deal With Stripes

You can give your studio couch a new square look when you make that next slip cover. It's a tricky idea and easy to execute. You change the appearance by using a striped fabric for the cover.

You match stripes into diamond-shaped squares on the top of the cover, but make the stripes run horizontally around the sides. Eight yards of 50-inch fabric will be enough material. The cost will be about six dollars if you do the simple sewing at your machine and make use of the attachments. Your local sewing center can show you shortcuts perhaps.

For a four-by-six couch, cut four square pieces of equal size to cover the top, allowing an inch on all sides for seams. In matching the pieces, allow the stripes of two squares to go one way, the others at right angles. Stitch these together half an inch from the edge with flat inside seams. For the skirt cut two 50-by-22-inch pieces so that stripes are horizontal along the 22-inch sides. Then cut four pieces the same length but only 37 inches wide. Stitch two of these into one strip 74 inches long and 22 inches wide

The skirt is enchanting in blue organdy with frothy white lace ruffles and blue satin bows—or with bows of white satin. It's just one piece from top to floor with the ruffles sewn on about 14 inches apart.

To make the table, nail a 14-inch-shaped board across the top of a packing box and fit the top tightly with sateen which matches the organdy in color. Then top with the organdy and tack in place around the table edge, where you also tack on a piece of double-stap tape.

Now back your organdy skirt with the sateen lining and snap it to the tape. On washing day, you just un-snap.

Quite an accomplishment, but frankly so easy! And then such a joy to make bedspread and curtains to match!

Madame Chiang Kai-shek, wife of China's generalissimo, has just authored a new book, "China Shall Rise Again." She says it was written in odd moments between conferences and lectures, during air raids and on inspection tours to the front with the Generalissimo.

Hope Skillman, the pretty young head of Ameritex Co. (producer of cottons) and one of the few women who direct the production and selling of fabrics in New York, says that American women will have to learn a lot more about plain business arithmetic before they gain equal recognition with men in business.

"Women are woefully lacking there," she says. "Few know anything about investments, insurance or taxation—or can even make heads or tails of an insurance policy or tax blank. Fewer still really know anything about business—production costs, overhead and what a business can afford to do and why. If women want to rank with men in business, they will simply have to step out and learn plain business arithmetic."

Here is a thumbnail sketch of Mrs. Typical Customer of 1941, selected by the National Retail Dry Goods Association in a national letter contest: She is Mrs. Clementine Thill of LaCrosse, Wis., a slim 35-year-old blonde, who is the mother of three—two boys and a girl. She says that her husband, who is 40, earns $30 a week installing and servicing oil burners. Mrs. Thill's hobbies are bridge, ice skating, hiking, music, and the movies. She does her own housework, makes some of her own clothes and lives in a 100-room apartment.

Hot apple sauce goes perfectly with pork dishes. Reheat sauce left over, if you are not making it up fresh at meal time. Sprinkle lightly with cinnamon.

MODES of the MOMENT

"Beard hat"—designed by Helen Liebert for your madder spring moods. It's a sailor with a looped chinband, made of shiny black straw stitched in multicolor wool. For your more sedate moods, wear the chin-band at the back of the head.

Study The Hems

When buying new towels carefully look over the hems. Well-wearing towels should have hems turned back neatly, should be stitched firmly with fine stitches, with the corners of the hems backstitched.

Cheese It

Equal portions of Roquefort and white cream cheese, blended and softened with a little cream make a delicious filling for white, Graham or Boston brown bread sandwiches. It can also be used for topping pastry strips served with soups or salads.

Old Meets New in the Living Room

By MARGARET KERNODLE
AP Feature Service Writer

Combining the old with the new is one of the most popular devices in decoration of American homes nowadays. It was the keynote of remodeling and modernizing the living room in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Lewis in Chicago.

Since the rest of the home was in Georgian furnishing, both Georgian and modern were used to coordinate the room with other parts of the house.

Brick Replaces Windows

The things taken away counted in bringing the room up-to-date. For instance, a central partition was removed and glass brick was used to replace several windows. Then the ceiling was dropped to permit a complete circuit of indirect fluorescent lighting.

Edwin G. Martin, of Evanston, Ill., the decorator, used a color scheme of beige, turquoise and henna especially because the room has a south and west exposure.

The walls were covered with natural grass-cloth. The ceiling is beige, with three shades of henna in the design and a border of deep henna. Draperies of natural-colored silk and mohair were hand-blocked in shades of henna with accents of turquoise and yellow.

Sectional Sofa

A four-piece sectional sofa at one end of the room and a modern sofa at the other end were covered in henna fabric. Two chairs at the bay window have the natural wood tones of the sofa in a fabric of floral pattern featuring turquoise.

Two mahogany armchairs, one in turquoise and one in henna, are on turquoise leather. Lamps with grass-cloth shades floored with gold repeat that color.

The fourth wall features sliding mirror panels which conceal a built-in bookcase complete with refrigerator and sink.

A Salad: Select a firm head of lettuce, remove the core, and wash the lettuce but do not un-head it. Stuff the center with cream cheese mixed into a thick hard-cooked egg salad. Wrap in waxed paper and chill. Using a sharp knife, cut the lettuce into crossway slices. Arrange on salad plates. Top with cold dressing or mayonnaise.

Hominy and browned link sausage make a fine winter pair. Mix them with half as much savory white sauce, pour into a buttered, shallow baking dish and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Accompany with buttered cabbage, fruit salad and gingerbread dessert.

An herb tip: Mix 1/2 teaspoon sweet basil into 1/2 cup canned tomato paste, spread over cheese sliced or spread on buttered toast. Heat until well browned and serve at once with a hot beverage. Basil also dresses up stewed or escalloped tomatoes.

Save the spiced vinegar from bottled sweet pickles and use it in salad dressings. Or pour it over sliced beets. After several hours the beets will be delicious pickled beets.

When making custard, cream, and pumpkin pie fillings you can use 2 egg yolks for each whole egg called for. Remember this when you are over supplied with egg yolks.

As early as 1920 Miss Kerr wanted to enter the mill business founded by her father in 1878, but her family would have none of it. "In those days it wasn't considered quite nice for girls to go into a mill," says Miss Kerr.

Her brother, manager of the mill, died in 1934, and Miss Kerr left her classroom and took active charge.

Old Meets New in the Living Room

By MARGARET KERNODLE
AP Feature Service Writer

Combining the old with the new is one of the most popular devices in decoration of American homes nowadays. It was the keynote of remodeling and modernizing the living room in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Lewis in Chicago.

Since the rest of the home was in Georgian furnishing, both Georgian and modern were used to coordinate the room with other parts of the house.

Brick Replaces Windows

The things taken away counted in bringing the room up-to-date. For instance, a central partition was removed and glass brick was used to replace several windows. Then the cove ceiling was dropped to permit a complete circuit of indirect fluorescent lighting.

Edwin G. Martin, of Evanston, Ill., the decorator, used a color scheme of beige, turquoise and henna especially because the room has a south and west exposure.

The walls were covered with natural grass-cloth. The ceiling is pale turquoise. The rug is in beige, with three shades of henna in the design and a border of deep henna. Draperies of natural-colored silk and mohair were hand-blocked in shades of henna with accents of turquoise and yellow.

Sectional Sofa

A four-piece sectional sofa at one end of the room and a modern sofa at the other end were covered in henna fabric. Two chairs at the bay window have er activities in tuberculosis, diphtheria prevention and syphilis control, with the expectation that they will subsequently be taken over by the appropriate public health authorities.

Interpreting the work of public health authorities in these three fields, thereby building up for them an increased fund of good will and support.

Promoting a continuity of standards and objectives by public health authorities through creating an informed public opinion that will demand efficient results from the constituted authorities.

Rallying public opinion to the support of efficient health authorities if unjustly attacked from any source, or if threatened with loss of positions or with curtailment of power and responsibility.

The sub-committees are the Social Hygiene Committee, Camp Happyland, Auditing, Publicity, Legislation and Township Chairmen.

During the past year the association was able to carry on its health education program along extended lines with more intensive efforts than had hitherto been possible. The distribution of materials issued by the National Tuberculosis Association, American Social Hygiene Association and school health - written, spoken and visual - increased. Approximately 12,000 publications were distributed. 8,000 of these were sent out as a roto-gravure sheet in newspaper publications through the E. D. C. campaign. The S. C. A. A. news and Flashs, both publications of the State Committee and State Charities Association came to the Board Members each month. Following the annual state meeting, copies of the S. C. A. A. News, carrying many interesting papers of the conference were distributed to about 130 organizations and interested individuals in the city and county.

Abstracts: At present 58 city and county doctors, who have requested them, receive the tuberculosis abstract - a sheet issued monthly by the National Tuberculosis Association as a service to physicians.

News Releases: Concerning local state and national activities were sent to all city and county papers on an average of once or twice a week. Prominent space has always been given by the editors and a real interest shown by them, resulting in several fine editorials on tuberculosis and syphilis and health subjects in general.

Speakers: Members of the Ulster County Medical Society who were willing to make talks on tuberculosis, social hygiene, cancer and other health subjects have been called on from the association for many organizations wishing such a program. They and the committee secretary have responded to requests from Granges, Parent-Teacher Associations, Y.W.C.A. New Paltz Normal School, Moran Business School, Nursing Committee and high school groups.

The students of the Kingston Hospital are given a talk of tuberculosis each year by the secretary and a set of book on tuberculosis, social hygiene and health subjects have been presented to the students of both the Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals as well as to the students of New Paltz Normal School.

Radio: Transcriptions furnished by the National Tuberculosis Association at the time of the seal sale and the Early Diagnosis of Tuberculosis campaign each spring found an open avenue of approach to the general public through the generous cooperation of WKNY, Kingston's broadcasting company.

Kingston High School students gave several dramatizations during April in the Early Diagnosis of Tuberculosis Campaign and in November and December, the high schools of Kingston, Ellenville, and Highland, and the 4-H Club group of Rifton presented plays on tuberculosis and Christmas seals.

During February, four periods of radio time were given to members of the Social Hygiene Committee, who gave talks relating to the syphilis program.

Spot announcements and fillers on tuberculosis, syphilis and Christmas seals were also used by the management of our radio station.

Exhibits: A health exhibit was sponsored by the committee at the Ulster County Field Day and Picnic at Forsyth Park during August. One thousand health pamphlets were given to visitors in the booth. A special exhibit of the need of more public health nurses in Ulster county was exhibited as well as a collection of Christmas seals from the beginning. Two X-rays loaned from the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital showing the healthy and diseased lung attracted hundreds of people attending the Fair.

Motion Pictures: Motion pictures have definitely proved their value in health education. Our experience shows that their value increased notably during the period covered by this report. The committee own two sound films, "The People Live" and "Behind the Shadows," and have used them in many group meetings as well as in high schools through the county. The State Department of Health and the Farm Bureau and 4-H Club have been most generous in giving us the use of their projectors and operators. We hope we may soon see a way to purchase a machine for this purpose, also additional health films which are in demand for our health education work.

Isotope Charts: The isotope chart is a real contribution to the field of visual education. Sets of 25 large and 100 small charts, which tell the story of tuberculosis completely and expressively were purchased from the National Tuberculosis Association.

R. N., served as resident nurse during August.

Nutrition, vitamins taken etc., do not show entirely in weight gained but some idea of this gain can be measured by the fact that these 85 children attending camp during the season added a total of 420 1/2 pounds. Several inquiries have come to the committee office as to how the spiritual needs of the children are taken care of during the stay at camp Happyland. The children are taken by each Sunday morning to both Catholic and Protestant services. Many children have learned for the first time their morning and night prayers while at camp Happyland.

Several of the children had defects - teeth, tonsils, etc. - corrected before entrance to camp. These children showed the greatest improvement in physical gain.

In Kingston, Doctors Joseph Jacobson, Frederic Holcomb, Kenneth LeFevre, Herbert Johnston and John Olivet took care of the surgical and medical problems before and during the camp season. While several county physicians assisted with physicals for the county children.

Much appreciated were contributions of milk, butter,

'Flight Command' Is New Thrill at Broadway

Thrills in the air and tense drama on earth mingle in "Flight Command," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's exciting drama of naval aviation with Robert Taylor, Walter Pidgeon and Ruth Hussey, now showing at the Broadway Theatre.

It is the romance of a Pensacola air cadet who goes through a baptism of fire with a crack naval squadron at North Island. Amid the thrills runs a story of friendship, a misunderstanding that threatens his career, and the intense loyalty of a group of daredevil flyers who laugh in the face of peril.

Taylor as Alan Drake, the cadet, is forceful and compelling as an actor, and Walter Pidgeon handles the role of the squadron commander skilfully. Ruth Hussey, his wife, plays an intense role. Frank Borzage directed the picture.

Principals include Paul Kelly, Shepperd Strudwick, Ned Pendleton, Red Skelton, Dick Purcell and others.

Ulster Committee on Tuberculosis And Public Health Submits Report

er activities in tuberculosis, diphtheria prevention and syphilis control, with the expectation that they will subsequently be taken over by the appropriate public health authorities.

Interpreting the work of public health authorities in these three fields, thereby building up for them an increased fund of good will and support.

Promoting a continuity of standards and objectives by public health authorities through creating an informed public opinion that will demand efficient results from the constituted authorities.

Rallying public opinion to the support of efficient health authorities if unjustly attacked from any source, or if threatened with loss of positions or with curtailment of power and responsibility.

The sub-committees are the Social Hygiene Committee, Camp Happyland, Auditing, Publicity, Legislation and Township Chairmen.

The activities in the field of tuberculosis, syphilis and public health education are financed through the sale of Christmas Seals.

That much has been accomplished in the field of tuberculosis is shown by a recent report of reported deaths in New York State. For the first 11 months of 1940 there were 2,022 as against 2,052 during the same period of 1939.

Health Education

During the past year the association was able to carry on its health education program along extended lines with more intensive efforts than had hitherto been possible.

The distribution of materials issued by the National Tuberculosis Association and school health—written, spoken and visual—increased. Approximately 12,000 publications were distributed. 8,000 of these were sent out as a roto-gravure sheet in newspaper publications during the E. D. C. campaign. The S. C. A. A. news and Flashes, both publications of the State Committee and State Charities Aid Association came to the Board Members each month. Following the annual state meeting, copies of the S. C. A. A. News, carrying many interesting papers of the conference were distributed to about 150 organizations and interested individuals in the city and county.

Abstracts: At present 58 city and county doctors, who have requested them, receive the tuberculosis abstract—a sheet issued monthly by the National Tuberculosis Association as a service to physicians.

News Releases: Concerning local state and national activities were sent to all city and county papers on an average of once or twice a week. Prominent space has always been given by the editors and a real interest shown by them, resulting in several fine editorials on tuberculosis and syphilis and health subjects in general.

Speakers: Members of the Ulster County Medical Society, who were willing to make talks on tuberculosis, social hygiene, cancer and other health subjects have been called on from the association for many organizations wishing such a program. They and the committee secretary have responded to requests from Granger, Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, Y.W.C.A. New Paltz Normal School, Moran Business School, Nursing Committees and high school groups.

The students of the Kingston Hospital are given a talk on tuberculosis each year by the secretary and a set of book on tuberculosis, social hygiene and health subjects have been presented to the students of both the Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals as well as to the students of New Paltz Normal School.

Radio: Transcriptions furnished by the National Tuberculosis Association at the time of the seal sale and the Early Diagnosis of Tuberculosis campaign each spring found an open avenue of approach to the general public through the generous cooperation of WKNY, Kingston's broadcasting company.

Kingston High School students gave several dramatizations during April in the Early Diagnosis of Tuberculosis Campaign and in November and December, the high schools of Kingston, Ellenville, and Highland, and the J.H. Club group of Ritters presented plays on tuberculosis and Christmas seals.

During February, four periods of radio time were given to members of the Social Hygiene Committee, who gave talks relating to the syphilis program.

Spot announcements and fillers on tuberculosis, syphilis and Christmas seals were also used by the management of our radio station.

Exhibits: A health exhibit was sponsored by the committee at the Ulster County Field Day and Picnic at Forsyth Park during August. One thousand health pamphlets were given to visitors in the booth. A chart showing the need of more public health nurses in Ulster to the general public, as well as a collection of Christmas seals, from the beginning. Two X-rays loaned from the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital showing the healthy and diseased lung attracted much attention and interested hundreds of people attending the Fair.

Motion Pictures: Motion pictures have definitely proved their value in health education. Our experience shows that their value increased notably during the period covered by this report. The committee owned two sound films, "Let My People Live" and "Behind the Shadows" and have used them in many group meetings as well as in high schools through the County. The State Department of Health and the Farm Bureau and 4-H Club have been most generous in giving us the use of their projectors and operators. We hope we may soon see a way to purchase a machine for this purpose, also additional health films which are in demand for health education work.

Isotype Charts: The isotype chart is a valuable contribution to the field of visual education. Sets of 20 large and well illustrated charts, which tell the story of tuberculosis compactly and expressively were purchased from the National Tuberculosis Association and used by speakers to illustrate their lectures on several occasions.

Early Diagnosis Campaign: Although a year's round health program is carried on by the committee, we cooperate with the National and State Tuberculosis Associations in a campaign during the month of April to emphasize the need and resources for early diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis. The slogan for the eleven-month annual nationwide campaign was "The X-ray Reveals Tuberculosis Before Symptoms Appear."

The value of tuberculin testing, X-ray, hospitalization, rest, lung collapse therapy and healthful living in the fight against tuberculosis is shown through known channels.

Negro Health Week: The committee cooperated in the celebration of Negro Health Week coming about March 1. Three organizations cooperated in this program.

Meetings: Two outstanding public meetings of the committee during the past year were the Social Hygiene meeting on February 12 sponsored by the Social Hygiene Committee and many other civic organizations, who sent representatives. Dr. Elizabeth Gardiner, Director of Maternity, Infancy and Child Hygiene of the New York State Department of Health was the speaker. An interesting discussion was held, and the speaker allowed the talk, "With These Weapons," an interesting movie was also shown. About 200 people attended this meeting.

Another public gathering of real importance was held on November 12. This meeting was sponsored by the committee and the Township Public Health Nursing Committees throughout the county. Organizations in the city and county responded most enthusiastically and about 175 discussed the need of more public health nurses for Ulster county. President Joseph M. Fowler, acting as chairman of the meeting, Dr. William S. Bush, president of the Ulster County Medical Society, Dr. Frederic W. Holcomb, superintendent of the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital and Mrs. Theodor Oxholm, chairman of the Nursing committees, spoke on various angles of the need for more nurses. An open discussion showed representatives in favor of the new program, which was explained by Dr. Hollis Ingraham, district state health officer. The plan proposed was that the Ulster County Board of Supervisors appropriate $12,000 a year—half of it to be refunded by the State of New York for the employment of five public health nurses. In addition, the State would give four more nurses in Ulster county without cost to the county as a demonstration of an adequate public health nursing program.

During the latter sessions of the Board of Supervisors, Mrs. Theodor Oxholm with other members of the township Public Health Nursing Committees appeared before the Supervisors to discuss the matter, further showing the great need for this public health program. During December the Supervisors voted unanimously to appropriate the $12,000 and set up the proposed public health nursing program.

On May 21 and 22, the president, vice president and secretary attended the annual meeting of the State Committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health in New York city. The theme of the conference was "How the Local Committees Might Aid in Implementing the Program for the Substantial Eradication of Tuberculosis in Upstate New York Within the Next Two Decades."

Early hospitalization and continued isolation of infected persons in tuberculosis hospitals and the examinations of all persons—including adults—exposed to tuberculosis in the home, with the provision of adequate relief for these families proved to be of utmost importance in the proposed program. The need of more public health nurses was also shown.

Ways and means of financing this tremendous program were discussed during the Christmas Seal Sale session. President Fowler was one of the speakers during the session.

A pioneer luncheon given for the members of the local committees who have been carrying on the fight against tuberculosis during the past 32 years, honored two of our members, Mrs. Clara Norton Reed and Joseph M. Fowler. Special mention was also made of the late Dr. Mary Gage Day, who was active in this fight for so many years.

The secretary also attended a Regional Christmas Seals Sale Conference and a mid-winter called by the State Committee.

Because of the fact that health problems are community problems the committee has encouraged the strengthening of this understanding so that the may assume whatever the opportunity arises. The Secretary has responded to numerous invitations and has served to the best of her ability wherever necessary at 20 city and county meetings.

Camp Happyland

A committee project started in 1926 as a demonstration has enjoyed its 14th season during 1940. Camp opened for the boys on July 2, with a full quota for the month at camp on July 4, in time for a celebration of the cream of perhaps the last session of fireworks—because of the new fire rules—donated by the camp chairman, James F. Loughran.

The boys showed unusual improvement under the care of the counselors, James Reynolds and Valentine Weisner and Miss Hilda Hart. R. N., served as resident nurse.

All the activities this year centered around Indian folk lore. This was carried through in handicraft, entertainment etc., and proved most attractive to the lads.

The girls started their season on August 2, enjoying a season of training and good times for another four weeks. The girls as well as the boys were most responsive and showed much improvement in every way. Counselors serving the girls during August were the Meses Kathryn Fogarty and Catherine Henebery. Miss Ruth Lapine,

R. N., served as resident nurse during August.

Nutrition, vitamins taken etc., do not show entirely in weight gained but some idea of this gain can be measured by the fact that these 85 children attending camp during the season added a total of 420 1/2 pounds. Several inquiries have come to the committee office as to how the spiritual needs of the children are taken care of, during the stay at camp Happyland. The children are taken by bus each Sunday morning to both Catholic and Protestant services. Many children have learned for the first time their morning and night prayers while at camp Happyland.

"Noticed any firearms bargains lately in The Freeman Want Ads, Sarg?"

Murray Reserves Ruling on Union

been held since before 1938. It was stated, and no quarterly financial statement made since 1936.

Some of the members who tried to get information about the affairs of the union were told that "we haven't got the books and papers here today," it was alleged. Later, it was claimed, these men eventually were "hounded out of their jobs." Men who complained at meetings, "when conditions at various shafts got so bad," he began to lose their jobs, too, it was stated.

Mr. Martocci charged that men went down into the workings and handled dynamite and caps on the same car, contrary to law and with the approval of labor officials. He said that the men were not receiving the wages to which they were entitled according to their contracts. "Men complaining of these things lost their jobs, too," said Mr. Martocci.

Henry Hirschberg, district attorney of Orange county and counsel for the defense, said that he was surprised at the scope of the remarks that had been made, there were so many references to things not mentioned in the papers submitted by the plaintiffs.

He declared that there had been great effort to exploit this case; that almost at once, following the filing of the complaint at Troy, newspaper articles had appeared and that on Thursday last circulated among the workers, referring to the in-jury that had been granted, urging work toward the "building of a new union."

Mr. Hirschberg said that he did not represent the International Union, but maintained that it was a necessary party to this action. He said that the International took over control in 1937, following complaints of lack of harmony in the local, and quoted the local's constitution as to the legality of that action. Since that time, he claimed, the local has been governed under the order of President Moroschi, of the International. An election was held when the local was reorganized in 1936, and every member could attend, Mr. Hirschberg said.

At this point Justice Murray interposed several questions to Mr. Hirschberg.

Lady. The NBC Press Department has chosen her as the heart throbs of February and sends forthwith this Valentine greeting. The Carnation program is a love story, and the NBC Chicago station is so sure that you will not wear her heart on her sleeve, she is setting the NBC Chicago staff on its ears with a huge chiffon handkerchief, embroidered with her telephone number, dangling from her coat pocket.

Clare Boothe, playwright and author, and Ruth Bryan Rhode, former U. S. Minister to Denmark, will be the featured guest of "Calling All Citizens," designed to interest American women in government affairs and the development of the new democratic society. The program will join them on the program which is the second being presented in co-operation with the new-fashioned, progressive, and progressive, Elizabeth Harrison Walker, daughter of President Benjamin Harrison, serves as broadcast moderator—2:30 to 3:00 p.m., EST, Saturday, over WABC-CBS.

There will be a special award ceremony, a avalanche of "America's" award-winning drama of 1940, will be repeated by popular request with Raymond Massey as the lead. The program is "The Birth of Lincoln's Birthday"—7:30 p.m., EST, Wednesday, over NBC-RD Network.

finest players join the "Screen Guild Theater" on Sunday, Feb. 9, when
Norma Shearer, Franchot Tone, Mary Astor, and Hattie McDaniel are heard on Columbia network in
"No Time For Comedy,"
a modern drama based on the domestic trials of a famous actress and her playwright husband—
7:30 to 9:00 p.m., EST,
Sunday, over WABC-CBS.

Aurelia D'Este, Operatic soprano from Chicago's South Side will make her debut during the "Your Dream Has Come True" program.
Miss D'Este once thought her dream was to come true when she was scheduled to make her opera debut in Italy
in the lead role of "La Boheme". Shortly before the event was to take place her benefactor died
and she was forced to return to the United States.
The young singer since has been trying in vain to continue her musical career, but couldn't seem to get the right break.
Her letter to the "Your Dream Has Come True" program gained for her
the opportunity she sought, and she will be given a chance to sing on a coast-to-coast network with Glenn Waddy—5:30 p.m., Sunday, over NBC-Blue Network.

One of the most famous of Negro spirituals, "Gile on Board, Little Children", will be one of the selections on Joe Emerson's "Hymns of All Churches" program—2:00 p.m., EST, Tuesday, over NBC-Red Network.

Walter Huston stars in the production of George W. Campbell's Casuo-politan Magazine story, "Master Mariner." In it, George Zachary, director, gives CBS coast-to-coast listeners a story of a first mate who always dreamed of becoming skipper of his own vessel—and didn't realize his ambition until he was demoted to captain of a tugboat. Then he became a hero. Lys Murray composes and directs the music—8:30 p.m., Friday, over WABC-CBS.

What would happen to ambitious young people in a world where nobody ever died or relinquished a job?
This haunting problem, just posed anew by statistics showing that the average age of America's population is steadily and rapidly increasing, will be characterized by Franchot Tone in an
"Everyman's Theater" play, "The Immortal
Gentleman"—9:30 p.m., Friday, over NBC-Red Network.

Heart-y congratulations are in order for pretty Louise King, the Lullaby Lady. The NBC Press Department has chosen her as the heart throb of February and sends forth with this Valentine greeting. The Caroleen program is broadcast Mondays on the Red Network. And although Louise may not wear her heart on her sleeve, she is setting the NBC Chicago staff on its ears with a huge chiffon handkerchief, embroidered with her telephone number, dangling from her coat pocket.

Clara Boothe, playwright and author, and Ruth Bryan Rolde, former U. S. Minister to Denmark, will be among the speakers on the second broadcast of "Calling All Citizens," designed to interest American women in government affairs and the defense of democracy. Other prominent speakers will join them on the program which is the second being presented in cooperation with the newly-formed Active Citizens' League. Elizabeth Harrison Walker, daughter of President Benjamin Harrison, serves as broadcast mediator—7:30 to 9:00 p.m., EST, Saturday, over WABC-CBS.
"Lincoln: The War Years," the "Cavalade of America" award-winning drama of 1940, will be repeated by popular request with Raymond Massey in the title role he created last year, on Lincoln's Birthday—7:30 p.m., EST, Wednesday, over NBC-Red Network.

John Rigney May Be Drafted Into Army During 1942

Giants to Have Services of Arnovich for 1941; Alex Pitko Is Now at Army Camp

With the status of professional ball players still in doubt over the question of the selective service act at least one club will not be hit as quickly as they thought. This week it was announced that Morrie Arnovich will not be drafted due to defective teeth.

Arnovich represented one of the more important baseball men eligible for call to the Army. He hasn't any dependents and it was believed his physical strength was up to par. However, the Wisconsin board announced that Morrie will be granted deferment until possibly the end of the baseball season or at least the closing months.

Quite a bit of controversy came up as a result of Arnovich's status. The New York Giants purchased him from the Reds and it wasn't sure whether Morrie would be taken by the Giants or the Army. Thus, the waiver price will be reported to Bill Terry at Miami later this month the question has been settled.

Although he probably won't be taken this season Johnny Rigney of the Chicago White Sox is destined to spend the 1942 season in camp. He has received his draft questionnaire and officials say that he will be called by fall.

Malin McCulloch who had a trial with the Chicago White Sox is now in an army camp. Alex Pitko, veteran minor league outfielder who had a trial with Washington and the Phillies is now at Fort Dix, N. J.

News of the other important baseball men is silent. Hank Greenberg is preparing for the training season. Terry Moore hopes to play with the St. Louis Cardinals again. Harry Laverage is currently in the St. Louis Dodger contract while other players seem not to be worrying too much about the future of their baseball careers.

Selection Is Near Of New Irish Coach Shaw and Boland Are Seen as Possible Choices

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 8 (AP).—The successor to Elmer F. Layden as director of athletics and head football coach at Notre Dame will be chosen within 48 hours, if he already hasn't been picked.

The identity of the new mentor, however, will not be revealed until his contract has been signed and sealed. The Rev. J. Hugh J. O'Donnell, president of the University, himself a famed varsity center, and teammate of Knute Rockne, made this positive today as he studied the recommendations of the faculty board in control of athletics, which met in closed session last night.

The Rev. Mr. O'Donnell said that he hoped to sign the new coach before March 1.

Layden, whose sudden resignation last Monday after seven years of service burst like a bombshell in the intercollegiate football world, remained at his home in South Bend. He took no part in the deliberations, nor was his opinion sought, although he quit Notre Dame with the esteem of the administration. He becomes commissioner of the National Professional Football League March 1 at a salary of $20,000 a year.

Gossip on the campus and South Bend opinion narrowed down to two choices—Lawrence T. "Buck" Shaw, coach at Santa Clara, Irish tackle in 1919-21, and Joe Boland, tackle in 1924-26, and present line coach.

John Rigney May Be Drafted Into Army During 1942

Giants to Have Services of Arnovich for 1941; Alex Pitko Is Now at Army Camp

With the status of professional ball players still in doubt over the question of the selective service act at least one club will not be hit as quickly as they thought. This week it was announced that Morrie Arnovich will not be drafted due to defective teeth.

Arnovich represented one of the more important baseball men eligible for call to the Army. He hasn't any dependents and it was believed his physical strength was up to par. However, the Wisconsin board announced that Morrie will be granted deferment until possibly the end of the baseball season or at least the closing months.

Quite a bit of controversy came up as a result of Arnovich's status. The New York Giants purchased him from the Reds and it wasn't sure whether Morrie would be taken by the Giants or the Army. Thus, the waiver price was brought up. However, as Arnovich will report to Bill Terry at Miami later this month the question has been settled.

Although he probably won't be taken this season Johnny Rigney of the Chicago White Sox is destined to spend the 1942 season in camp. He has received his draft questionnaire and officials say that he'll be called by fall.

Malin McCulloch who had a trial with the Chicago White Sox is now in an army camp. Alex Pitko, veteran minor league outfielder who had trials with Washington and the Phillies is now at Fort Dix, N. J.

News of the other important baseball men is silent. Hank Greenberg is preparing for the training season. Terry Moore hopes to play with the St. Louis Cardinals again. Harry Lavagetto is currently rejecting a Dodger contract while others seem not to be worrying too much about the future of their baseball careers.

Selection Is Near Of New Irish Coach

Shaw and Boland Are Seen as Possible Choices

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 8 (AP)—The successor to Elmer F. Layden as director of athletics and head football coach at Notre Dame will be chosen within 48 hours, if he already hasn't been picked.

The identity of the new mentor, however, will not be revealed until his contract has been signed and sealed. The Rev. J. Hugh J. O'Donnell, president of the University, himself a famed varsity center and teammate of Knute Rockne, made this positive today as he studied the recommendations of the faculty board in control of athletics, which met in closed session last night.

The Rev. Mr. O'Donnell said that he hoped to sign the new coach before March 1.

Layden, whose sudden resignation last Monday after seven years of service burst like a bombshell in the intercollegiate football world, remained at his home in South Bend. He took no part in the deliberations, nor was his opinion sought, although he quit Notre Dame with the esteem of the administration. He becomes commissioner of the National Professional Football League March 1 at a salary of $20,000 a year.

Gossip on the campus and South Bend opinion narrowed down to two choices—Lawrence T. "Buck" Shaw, coach at Santa Clara, Irish tackle in 1919-21, and Joe Boland, tackle in 1924-26, and present line coach.

Shaw, who was at Santa Clara, Irish tackle in 1919-21, and Joe Boland, tackle in 1924-26, and present line coach.

COLD AND CLEAR

Threats of High Water Lessened By Cold Weather

The heavy rain which started shortly after 9 o'clock Friday morning and continued until around 11 o'clock at night raised streams generally, but up to a late hour this morning there were no reports to the Department of Highways office that they were dangerously high, or that, with one exception, any serious trouble was being caused to highways.

Report to the New York City Department of Highways office here showed a total rainfall of 2.13 inches registered at the head works of the Ashokan Reservoir. Greatest danger was that smaller streams, pouring their waters into the main arteries would swell the latter to such proportions that the ice might be broken loose and cause jams along their course. Flood conditions from such causes would reach their peak later in the day, but colder weather this morning tends to lessen the danger.

There were reports of icy conditions where water had poured over highways in certain locations, but the only trouble of any importance reported to the Highway Department was in the Lake Hill section on the Woodstock-Mt. Tremper road. Men were being sent up early this morning, an ice jam having formed under the bridge crossing the stream and water being on the roadway, although not to any great depth at the time of the report.

Landon Criticizes Lease-Lend Bill

advocates had stated it would not do so.

He posed for the committee a number of questions regarding long range policy. One of them was: "Is it the intention of Congress to grant this broad power to make unlimited commitments to the British government, without any attempt to discover what that government intends to do in the realm of world power politics? Without serious consideration of where such a wide open program might lead the American people in the future?"

"Is it the intention of congress," he asked further, "to give to the President the power to supply money, ships, planes—and ultimately and it seems to me inevitably men—to the French government is restored? * * * until he has restored or recaptured all the lands overrun by Hitler? * * * until Finland and Poland have been returned to the territories taken by Russia? * * * until Japan has been driven out of China? * * * until Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania are restored, as democracies?"

Congress Has No Choice

"Remember," Landon declared, "Once that one man has set in motion the forces that inevitably lead to war, congress has no choice but to support the program, the nation will be committed to carry on until the bitter end."

He said it was argued that the bill did not have the powers which his questions implied but "I say the powers are there."

"I have heard it stated it is preposterous to suggest the President would use these powers," he continued. "Then I suggest it is equally preposterous to suggest that the congress grant these powers."

Landon declared "I have seen no claim that this bill is to be any help in our first job in industrial production for National Defense and aid to Britain. There has been no showing that present executive powers are inadequate to bring defense production to its peak. Yet congress is asked to delegate more power when the President has not exhausted the powers already possible."

San Pedro, Calif., Feb. 8 (P)—Capt. W. L. Scofield, state fisheries supervisor, warned fishermen in the Santa Catalina channel today to watch out for a giant bull Steeler seal which has gone berserk. Scofield said he had received several reports of the seal attacking small boats and ripping fishing nets between San Pedro and Catalina Island.

A Chinese and a wild bear shared the same tree when chased by a fierce tiger, according to Nicolas Blakow, leading authority on wild life in Manchuria, who aided in the rescue of the two perchers. As reported from Mukden, Blakow and a trapper came upon the man and bear, motionless with fear, in an oak tree, the dreaded Manchurian tiger crouched on the snow below. The trapper shot the tiger at 150 paces.

Wyoming game wardens arrested 710 persons in the two year period, 1939-40.

Murray Has Heavy Calendar at Term Of Supreme Court

A heavy calendar faced Supreme Court Justice William H. Murray, who held regular special term at Kingston Friday. It was late in the afternoon before adjournment was taken.

The first motion argued, following the signing of orders and disposing of ex parte cases, was that of Vincent G. Connelly, appearing for the city of New York, who asked for confirmation of the first separate report of commissioners of appraisal for Delaware Section No. 11, on lands taken in Sullivan county for the New York city water project. Sixteen parcels were involved in the report and objections to the awards granted by the commission were made by attorneys representing at least half of them.

Mr. Connelly told the court that in most of the cases the awards made were at least 50 per cent higher than the values fixed by the city's appraisers while the general average was nearer 65 per cent in excess.

Former Senator Walton, appearing for three of the objectors, said that the property owners were entitled to a "just and equitable" award, not merely the "market value." He said that "everything these people have been taken away from them; they are entitled to more than just the market value of their properties." The ordinary rule of law in condemnation proceedings does not apply to these cases, he was contended.

$16,000 Valuation

In the matter of the award of $12,000 for property of Henry Tillson, Mr. Walton said that a condemnation had placed a valuation of $16,000 on the buildings, in addition to which there was "a large land value." He asked that in the cases of his clients the awards be sent back to the commission for further consideration, or that they be referred to another commission.

Much the same objections and recommendations were made by other claimants who found awards made unsatisfactory.

Awards to which objections were made were those to: Henry Tillson, Mary Gertrude Cain, Richard Van Keuren, Dewey and Ethel Van Keuren, Ivan V. and Renna Conklin, Danica S. Stankovick, George Gorton, Bruce and Ada Decker.

Attorney appearing for George Gorton, in the course of his argument, declared that the property was known as "The show place of the Neversink Valley." "Nice view," suggested Justice Murray.

In the matter of confirming the second separate report of the Commission on Delaware Section No. 9, Attorney Connelly told the court that there were no objections to this report.

William A. Kaercher, of Flanagan & Kaercher, argued a motion for inspection of the minutes of the grand jury in the matter of the indictment of Edward A. Seymour on forgery counts. He said "we believe that the indictment was found on insufficient legal evidence or that illegal evidence was submitted to the grand jury." He said that the property described in the mortgage to which his client was charged with having forged the name of his brother, Henry C. Seymour, belonged at the time to the defendant.

District Attorney Haver questioned the good faith of the present action. He submitted to the court the minutes in the case of the grand jury which found the indictment last September and said that the case already had been moved for trial. Mr. Haver said that the defendant had been charged with forging not only his brother's name but also that of Attorney Floyd Powell, and that while he had been the owner of record of the property involved, foreclosure proceedings were pending at the time.

In two cases involving accidents to Ellenville parties, Myer Jacobowitz against Balotin and Rose Silverman against Rothkopf, motions for examination before trial were opposed by former County Judge Cook on the ground that they sought conclusions and not merely facts. Both cases were for damages for injuries sustained in falls on stairways.

Hotel Ownership Action
Ownership of the Overlook Mountain House is involved in an action pending for some time and in which a motion was argued Friday by Irving Schneider, a New York attorney. Mr. Schneider, some of whose allusions disturbed even the dignity of the presiding judge, asked for a declaratory judgment and an injunction restraining Harry Newgold, son and executor of the estate of Morris Newgold, reputed owner of the Overlook property, from proceeding with the administration of the estate.

ing with the administration of the estate.

Schneider appeared for Ga Newgold, stepson of Morris. He was particularly stressed was question of the ownership certificate for 1,000 shares of the Bon Ray Hotel Corp., which was claimed owned by the C look property, it being alleged about a million dollars was involved. There have been years of litigation in the matter. The original certificate was said to have been in the name of Rachel Newgold, deceased. Mr. Schneider referred to the ing, in a book of dicties of alleged new certificate transfer the shares to Harry Newgold. question of the validity of the tificate is among the mat which have been in litigation it is understood, has not yet settled. Claim is that while might be in the estate of Mr Newgold, actually it is in the ate of Rachel Newgold.

Mr. Schneider claimed that a $300,000 had been put into Overlook Mountain House property, declared to be part of the Ray Corp. holdings and there represented in the disputed tificate.

It was alleged that thousand dollars worth of material w had been on the location had sold to "local junkies." The is asked to stop the removal this material till a declarat judgment had been granted, ground that all eventually will into the estate of Rachel Newgold.

Frederick H. Stang, of court appeared against the motion. said that an inventory taken Harry Newgold had shown $7,000 of material at the Overl but claimed that should be perhaps 25 per cent, because inaccessibility. He submitted davits in the matter.

In this, as in other matters gued during the day, Justice M ray reserved decisions, attorn submitting briefs in support their contentions.
